Controls take new setback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Banking Committee dealt a probably fatal blow Friday to the Nixon administration's hopes to extend the Cost of Living Council beyond April 30.

By a 21-10 vote, the committee tabled all legislation concerning wage and price controls, the Economic Stabilization Act and the extension of the council.

The Senate already has killed all pending controls bills.

The size of the vote indicated attempts to resuscitate controls legislation would face stiff resistance.

Rep. William B. Widnall, R-Pa., objected even to having a meeting on the subject, since the majority of the committee had opposed extending the council or mandatory controls over health and construction industries, which the administration had also requested.

Reps. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, and William S. Moorhead, D-Pa., pushed for some form of standby authority to permit reimposition of controls if inflation worsens.

The administration originally hoped to get Congress to extend mandatory wage and price controls over health and some other industries. This week, however, director John T. Dunlop said the council would accept a bill proposed by Rep. J. William Stanton, R-Ohio, which would end controls but keep the council alive as a research and data-gathering agency with a mandate to monitor previous wage-price agreements.

In its present form, the council administers wage and price controls.

Bomb call turns up nothing

MALDEN — The Malden IGA Foodliner received a telephone call at approximately 6:20 p.m. Friday stating a bomb had been placed in the building. However, a search conducted by Malden police failed to locate a bomb.

The bomb threat was the second received in Malden this week.

The first one came Wednesday when the superintendent of Malden schools received a telephone call from a male caller stating that a bomb had been placed in the Malden High School building.

Again a search failed to turn up a bomb.

Many blind and disabled persons short changed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A middle-aged woman who is blind and suffering from diabetes and multiple sclerosis has found her welfare checks cut by nearly one-third.

The reduction has left her in a quandary over what to do about her sizable doctor and drug bills.

A blind woman and her husband, who has a limited disability and requires frequent medical care, have had their aid payments cut by a similar amount.

They have been forced to rely on relatives, friends and private relief agencies to help them with doctor bills, rent payments and grocery bills.

They are among hundreds of blind Missourians caught in a financial bind since the federal government assumed certain aid payments to the blind, disabled and aged at the first of the year. Government officials say their plight is temporary.

The federal program, called Supplementary Security Income, is administered by the Social Security Administration. The state of Missouri had administered such aid programs in the past. And the state agreed to make up the difference if a recipient received less under the new federal plan.

The changeover apparently went smoothly during the first month, but the program fell apart in February.

The federal SSI payments to many blind Missouri recipients were more than they should have been — with the overpayment varying from a few dollars to as much as $200.

Some recipients returned the higher checks. Others tried to return the checks and were told the money was theirs. And still others spent the money, perhaps thinking they were entitled to higher payments under the federal program.

The federal overpayment in February has left the aid to the blind program in a bureaucratic quagmire.

Because of the higher federal payments, the state checks were reduced or cut out entirely, and officials in the Missouri Welfare Department say they haven't worked out a solution yet. The federal payments were returned to their normal level last month, but state checks still have not been sent to recipients who received overpayments on their federal checks.

Eldo Throckmorton, assistant chief of the Bureau of Family and Children's Services in the state office, said this week he was hopeful of getting state supplemental checks covering March and April in the mail in a couple weeks.

Tom Riat, assistant district manager for the Social Security Administration in Kansas City, said the federal government has made no decision on trying to recover its February overpayments, which apparently resulted from the transfer of data from the state program to the federal. Throckmorton said the state will wait for the federal decision before making a determination about how to proceed with its stalled February payments.

Throckmorton said there were about 400 blind Missouri residents affected by the foulup, mostly in the Kansas City and Joplin areas, with a scattereing of others in St. Louis and the rest of the state.

Riat said the other three states in his district — Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska — were not affected.

A 40-year-old Kansas City blind woman, suffering from diabetes and multiple sclerosis, is supposed to receive about $45 from SSI, $94 from the state and another $114 in disability benefits each month. In February, her SSI check was about $100 higher than usual.

2 receive serious injuries

Two persons received serious injuries in separate traffic accidents on area roads Friday, according to the highway patrol.

The first accident occurred at 11:55 a.m. Friday at the intersection of Highways 51 and 72 near Patton when Whitney Kempton, 77, of Refugio failed to stop his northbound car at a stop sign and struck an eastbound tractor-trailer truck driven by Donald Cooper, 36, of Fridericktown.

Kempton was taken to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau for treatment os serious injuries.

Dossie Lee Chalmers, 41, of Clarksville, Ark., was seriously injured at 12:30 p.m. Friday five miles south of Gobler on Route NN when he lost control of his automobile which overturned in a ditch.

Chalmers was taken to Dunklin County Memorial Hospital, then transferred to John Gaston hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Nixon in Paris

PARIS (AP) — President Nixon arrived Friday night to attend the memorial Mass for President George Pompidou.

"Pompidou was a man of extraordinary intelligence, of dedication to duty and above all of indomitable courage," Nixon said.

Donated money to be returned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any money donated to President Nixon to help pay his income tax will be returned, a White House spokesman said Friday.

The comment came as various campaigns were launched around the country to send money to the President.

The Florida state Republican chairman, L.E. "Tommy" Thomas, said he wanted one million Floridians to mail $1 to the White House "and let the President know that you think he is one in a million."

A group in Kentucky reported it has raised more than $250 for a "Peoples Fund for Nixon's Taxes."

The White House said it has received more than a dozen telephone offers to help the President. A spokesman said callers were being discouraged from sending money and that any money actually received would be returned.

"If anybody sends money in the mail to the White House it is returned to them in the form of a check, cash or whatever it is," said the spokesman.

The Internal Revenue Service said in the event donations were used to help pay the President's more than $465,000 tax debt, it isn't clear whether the money would be considered a gift, or income.

If the money qualified as a gift, the President would not have to pay any tax on it, IRS said.

But, if it were classified as income, the President would have to pay income taxes on it in future years.

"We've never ruled on this, since the matter has not come up before," an IRS spokesman said. "It would boil down to a factual situation."

Chicago multimillionaire W. Clement Stone, who already has contributed $5.8 million to Nixon presidential campaigns, said he would not hesitate to help Nixon pay his tax debt. The White House turned down the Stone offer Thursday.

Thomas said in a statement that many callers expressed resentment "that it is apparent that what was good enough for Hubert Humphrey and Lyndon Johnson is too good for the President."

"While they were allowed huge deductions for contributing their papers to the government, President Nixon is not," Thomas said.

The White House said Wednesday, in announcing Nixon's decision to pay the additional taxes and interest for the years 1969-1972, that any errors in his tax returns "were made by those to whom he delegated the responsibility for preparing his returns and were made without his knowledge and without his approval."

Despite this disclaimer, the IRS holds a taxpayer responsible for knowing what is on his returns.

"If a taxpayer looks over his return and signs it and sends it in, presumably he knows what's on the return," the IRS spokesman said.

The IRS said its audit for the President's 1969-1972 returns is complete, and it did not feel any civil penalties were warranted.

Nixon had asked the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation to look at his returns after questions were raised. He said he would stand by the committee's decision. The committee staff subsequently said it felt Nixon owed $476,431 in back taxes and interest. The IRS, a few hours later, said it felt Nixon owed some $465,000. Nixon agreed to pay the IRS figure, and the committee said its inquiry was over.

Chapin convicted on 2 lying counts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dwight Chapin, once President Nixon's appointments secretary, was convicted Friday on two counts of lying to a grand jury investigating political sabotage in the 1972 presidential campaign.

Sentencing of the 33-year-old Chapin, now an airline vice president on leave, was set by U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell for May 15. Chapin will remain free without bond.

"I'm going to continue to fight for my innocence," Chapin told reporters afterward. "On the day I was indicted I went out on my front lawn and said I was innocent. I intend to fight this thing all the way through."

He also said "obviously I am very disappointed. The judge threw out one count of the indictment, the jury threw out one count and on a portion of another I was found not guilty."

He said he and his wife will return to their home in Winnetka, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, by Monday when he must report to a probation officer.

Immediately after the verdict, delivered by a jury that deliberated nearly 11½ hours, Chapin walked over to his weeping wife and kissed her.

He was the eighth former White House aide convicted either by guilty plea or trial.

The jury of seven men and five women found Chapin innocent of one count. A fourth count was dismissed by Gesell during the five-day trial.

Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Chapin was invited by the judge to submit "all the information about yourself" before sentencing.

The jury was asked by the judge how it voted on the first count in which Chapin was charged with making two false statements to the grand jury last April 11.

Foreman Charles L. Wesley, a retired postal worker, said the jury convicted Chapin of lying when he said he never discussed distribution of campaign literature with Donald H. Segretti, an acknowledged political saboteur hired by Chapin.

But the jury found that Chapin had not lied on the second part of the count where he was charged with falsely denying that he knew Segretti had distributed statements.

Despite the split on the question Chapin stands convicted on that count.

The jury also determined that Chapin lied when he said that he had never given Segretti "any directions or instructions with respect to any single or particular candidate."

It found him innocent of a charge that he lied when he told Segretti to talk to the FBI at a time when it appeared Segretti would be questioned by agents.

Chapin appeared calm and relaxed during the two days that it took the jury to reach its verdict.

U.S. backing of assassination unravels

By PAT GROJEAN

With chilling suspense and drama, Robert Vaughan, formerly of Sikeston, in his new book, "The Valkyrie Mandate", vividly unravels the intriguing web of circumstances surrounding and leading up to the assassination in 1963 of South Vietnam's President Ngo Dinh Diem and American involvement in the plot.

Vaughan, 38, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Vaughan, 410 Shady Lane, and currently is best known for another of his approximately 24 books — "Brandywine's War", a candid and unflattering portrait of the American military in Vietnam which has been reprinted in 74 countries and will soon become a major motion picture.

"The Valkyrie Mandate" was recently published by Simon and Schuster of New York.

In the last few years, information on American actions and involvement during the Vietnam War in places and events previously unknown to the general public have come to the public's attention. Vaughan's new book, although a novel, tells of such an incident -- American backing of the plot to overthrow the South Vietnamese government in 1963.

According to Joseph P. Shea in a copywrited story in the Feb. 22 edition of the Paradise Valley (Ariz.) American, Vaughan says the book is based on secret State Department and Defense Department papers which were among those burned during the Watergate hearings by Federal Bureau of Investigation Chief L. Patrick Gray during the Watergate hearings.

The papers, Vaughan says in the article, reveal official United States complicity in the death of President Diem. According to the book, President Diem, a Catholic ruler of Buddhist Vietnam, was assassinated as part of a military coup encouraged and planned in part by advisors from the United States with official authority. Vaughan says the transcripts bear this out.

According to the article, the papers — in photocopied transcripts — were given to Vaughan by a congressional aide to an unidentified Southern congressman before the Watergate affair became known.

In the Shea article, Vaughan says he is not absolutely sure the documents are valid, or that they are part of the same material burned by Gray. But, he says, after extensive research in Vietnam, where he was a helicopter maintenance instructor for three years, the material seems "to have the same rhythm" as other papers about the same period.

Set in Saigon during a period when tensions and tempers were near boiling or exploding, the story unfolds of the "Valkyrie Mandate," which committed America to the coup, and of the lives of people of different nationalities that it completely altered.

Extensive research by the author makes itself very clear throughout the book, as facts about that period of time in Saigon, the number of Americans there, some of the events and descriptions of Saigon are entwined with the plot of the story.

For example, encyclopedias recount the assassination of Diem in that year as a result of a military coup, although, of course, mention nothing about American involvement.

Robert Vaughan

Near the beginning of the book, Vaughan tells of the suicide by burning of five Buddhist monks near the presidential palace. History also relates this incident which rather foretells of other deaths that follow later in the book.

The reader becomes totally involved in the book from the very beginning, as he is introduced to Saigon, its make- up, smells, people, sounds and customs. Vaughan's words give the reader the feeling that he is awakening in the city and later that he is an eye witness to the rest of the action. As Vaughan describes scenes or events, the reader can almost visualize it taking place.

Each character, from President Diem and his brother Hgo Dinh Nhu and the American advisors most involved in the plot, such as Justin Barclay and Gen. Andrew MacKenzie, to the dashing French whoremaster and his most prized and useful --- employe, Princess Tamara, is carefully developed through actions and words by the characters themselves and other characters, and in part by the third person point- of- view in which the story is written.

True and gentle, but rather forbidden, love is woven with events at the whoremaster's house, political violence and desire and striving for power and survival in Vaughan's book. Through Vaughan's combination, the reader moves easily through the book.

Valkyrie --- taken from Norse mythology -- is defined as any of Odin's maidens who hover over battlefields — choosing warriors to be victorious and who conduct the souls of the slain to Valhalla. It would have been extremely difficult to choose a title which would have related better to the tale told by Vaughan.

There is much more to the suspenseful plot and characters that cannot be revealed without ruining the book for those who want to read it. Upon completing the book, the reader is left with a still, yet rather restless, feeling that is extremely difficult to explain.

The book is made more interesting by the fact that Vaughan is from Southeast Missouri, although he now lives in Phoenix, Ariz., preparing his new novel "Glory Dust", which will describe the founding of an American oil empire.

Vaughan, a 1955 graduate of Sikeston High School, attended many colleges and universities while serving in the Army. He was discharged from active duty after publication of "Brandywine's War", which was unflattering to the military.

During his 17 years as an Army helicopter pilot, he earned the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Bronze Star.

Lyman Dame, 21, of 116 N. Kingshighway reported to city police Friday that eight tapes were stolen from his car between 9 p.m. Thursday and 11 a.m. Friday, and the tape player was damaged beyond repair.

Dame said his car was parked in front of the Bible Book Store, 112 N. Kingshighway, where it was broken into and the tapes, valued at $48, were taken. The tape player was valued at $60.

Leon Travis, 846 E. Kathleen St., was released on $35 bond following his arrest Friday afternoon on a peace disturbance charge.

Police said they were called to the Travis home by his wife, Mrs. Louise Travis, who said he forced his way into their home and started trouble.

Travis will be arraigned in City Court Thursday.

NATIONAL BOYS' CLUB WEEK

In 1860, the forerunner of the modern Boys' Clubs of America began its work with the youth of pre-Civil War America. The success of this outstanding organization is attested to by the fact that today a staff of more than 6,000 professional youth counselors working in 1,000 Boys' Clubs located in communities across the United States now provide companionable leadership, vocational guidance and special counseling for over one million boys.

This year, during the period from April 7th-13th, the nation will observe National Boys' Club Week. The great strength of the Boys' Clubs has always been that they have worked within the community at the local level to meet local problems that they know better than anyone else. There are many examples. One of them is to be found in Dayton, Ohio. There, as in many communities, homeowners complained about the scarcity of workers to do odd jobs, ranging from yard work, car washing and window cleaning to painting – the time- consuming chores that plague every homeowner. At the same time, many young people, including members of the Dayton Boys' Club, were unable to find part-time and summer jobs. To give boys the chance to do useful work that would prepare them for occupations in later life and to meet a community need, the Boys' Club set up a Job Bank program designed to bring potential employers and boys in need of jobs together. A staff member of the Club coordinated the effort. The Job Bank now offers jobs year round with heavy concentration on summer employment, and hundreds of boys have had the experience of a successful working relationship. They have gained a first step up the ladder of success in the working world.

A Boys' Club is a community asset of great value. It deserves year- round support. Boys' Club Week is an appropriate time to broaden awareness of this fact across the nation.

HELP THE VIETNAM VET

Early last year, to the enormous relief of their families and countrymen, about 600 servicemen who had been held as prisoners of war in Southeast Asia returned home. Their return was appropriately greeted by fanfare and intense publicity.

America has no difficulty getting "up" for the dramatic homecoming of our POWs. But what about the other seven million veterans of the Vietnam era, including more than three million who served in the Southeast Asian theater? What have we done for them lately?

Vietnam veterans have faced and continue to face unique difficulties as they attempt to enter the mainstream of American society. They fought in the longest, most expensive, and least understood war in U. S. history.

The Vietnam vet, in a sense, is a victim of the modern age of communications technology. That technology brought the ugly realities of war into the homes of millions of Americans night after night in living color for years on end. Today that vet is a continuing reminder of war most citizens would rather forget.

But the question must be faced: Because the war in Southeast Asia has been less well understood than, say, World War II, is the Vietnam vet's service and sacrifice any less honorable than GI Joe's?

Congress is now considering veterans legislation that would be an important step toward showing this nation's gratitude to the men who heeded the call to serve. One bill (S.2784), which would accelerate educational benefits for Vietnam Era Veterans, was taken up in heaings by the Senate Veterans Affairs Sub-Committee on March 29.

But there is much more we can do. Vietnam vets — including the more than 340,000 disabled — who require assistance to regain their emotional or physical health should receive the very best that this country can offer. Both the public and private sectors of our economy should put the vet at the top of their hiring lists as jobs become available.

And each of us should repent of his neglect today and seek out a veteran and thank him.

As the U. S. moves closer to adoption of a metric system of measurement, the National Association of Manufacturers comments: "Each sector of the American economy should select the most efficient cost, benefit approach in changing over to the metric system in cooperation with the National Metric Conversion Board. While there have been astronomical estimates on the conversion costs, no one really knows just how much it will be. However, there will be little incentive to look for thoughtful low-cost solutions if subsidies are made available by the federal government. We should rely on the ingenuity of the American people to find ways of circumventing the costs of conversion, and target dates for conversion should not include the time taken to devise the best possible program."

JUST FROM ONE AD

There are very few customers in a market for only one item on any one day. In one study only 44 women in 10,000 purchased the average package goods brand when no ad for it appeared in their newspaper. When a newspaper ad for the same brand did appear in their newspaper 50 in 10,000 went out and bought it. This is an actual sales increase, from one ad, of 14%.

What's more, after one newspaper ad, for just one nationally advertised brand in a product category, sales for the entire product category will take a 15% jump.

We know that newspapers give you coverage of nearly all of those readers ready to buy. After exposure to just one little newspaper ad, an additional 4% said they'd pick the test brand the next time that they buy.

As you can see there is really nothing to it. All it takes is a little ink on paper ... newspaper.

RULE OF LAW

A statement by the president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the largest farm organization in the nation, on the progress of farm labor relations legislation shows how inexorably the rule of law under representative government moves forward.

The official pointed out that enactment of a new farm labor law will be given top priority by the Farm Bureau in the 93rd Congress. He also observed, "Our Farm Bureau policy clearly states that we uphold the right of employees to bargain collectively, but condemn the use by either labor or management of force, coercion, intimidation, secondary boycotts, or any other unfair means applied by one side to force its will upon the other. What's wrong with having a special farm labor board similar to the National Labor Relations Board, to consider the special problems of agriculture? What is wrong with secret ballot elections for farm workers, or prohibiting boycotts in agriculture as they are presently prohibited in industry?" The pressure for farm labor legislation has arisen as a result of excesses in the organizing of farm workers, excesses that have deprived consumers of the right of free choice in the marketplace and have threatened to subject farmers -- and consumers -- to a type of dictatorial economic control in the name of collective bargaining that free citizens cannot accept.

Three states now have laws banning the use of the secondary boycott and providing for secret ballot election for farm workers, and the drive is continuing for similar legislation in other states as part of the campaign to restore the freedom to market for the producers and sellers of farm commodities. Thus the wheels of the democratic process and law continue to turn -- slowly but surely.

THE ADMIRATION SOCIETY

Down in Jefferson City there is an admiration society. It is composed of at least three members — and possibly a few more. Main members of this admiration group are Governor Christopher Bond, Attorney General John C. Danforth and Lieutenant Governor William Phelps.

Here is the way the society operates:

General Danforth thinks Governor Bond is fine material for the presidency; Governor Bond thinks General Danforth would make a candidate for the GOP nomination for United States Senator; and that leaves Governor Phelps, who is a bit on the outside, mainly because he is the lowest on the totem pole when it comes to politics.

So there you have it. Then aside from these men, there are some appointees of Governor Bond who think Governor Bond is a remarkable man; they think General Danforth is a great attorney general and undoubtedly they think Bill Phelps is an exceptional lieutenant governor.

Governor Bond, who attended the recent GOP Lincoln day affair in Kansas City, was asked by a reporter at Kansas City about defending President Richard M. Nixon. Governor Bond said Missouri voters are too smart to think the Watergate scandal is "a product or reflection of the Republican party, either nationally or in Missouri."

When he was asked later if he would defend President Nixon's actions in connection with Watergate, Missouri's wealthy governor replied, "I don't have the full facts to conduct a defense."

One can only wonder just what Governor Bond has been doing for the past several months. Do you suppose it is possible that Governor Bond has not yet made up his mind about Spiro Agnew?

It has not been too many months ago when both Governor Bond and Attorney General John C. Danforth were both defending President Nixon. They seem to have quit that now. It is possible that the reason they "pulled in their horns" was the fact that Mr. Nixon's popularity for some reason or other fellow to an all-time low of 26 per cent.

Remember the old slogan, "politics makes strange bedfellows." Doesn't it?

GROWING TRADE DICTATES CHANGE

There is good reason to believe that cookbooks of the future will discuss heating a liter of water to 100 degrees centigrade, footballs will be kicked from the 20 meter line, and speedometers will measure kilometers instead of miles.

Congress is considering the establishment of a ten- year timetable for conversion to the metric (SI) system of measurement. A National Metric Conversion Board would be empowered to set up an official plan for making the change. Probably this will happen soon because it makes good sense to measure in units of ten.

We are used to feet, quarts, and pounds, but the rest of the world is not. With international trade growing by metric-measure leaps and bounds, the U. S. is beginning to suffer because our products don't fit metric tools and our tools don't fit foreign products. Congress ought to set up procedures for making the change, allowing maximum flexibility. While metric should be the "official" system of measurement, there is no reason why it needs to be the "only" system for people who prefer the old ways. A Metric Board, large enough to represent all of the interests affected, should report to the President, not a single government department. Also the Metric Board, not Congress, will be best qualified to set a fixed date for the official conversion because probems might develop which cannot now be foreseen.

It will be an expensive, but necessary change. Fortunately, there is not much support for government subsidizing the changeover. Each sector of the economy should have the incentive of finding the most efficient means of making the change and this is less likely to happen if there is "free" subsidy money available from the government.

THE LONG, WRONG ROAD TO PEACE

When Pyrrhus was about to sail for Italy, Cineas, a wise and good man, asked him what were his intentions and expectations.

"To conquer Rome," said Pyrrhus.

"And what will you do next, my Lord?"

"Next I will conquer Italy."

"And after that?"

"We will subdue Carthage, Macedonia, all Afrida and all Greece"

"And when we have conquered all we can, what shall we do?"

"Do? Why, then we will sit down and spend our time in peace and comfort."

"Ah, my lord," said the wise Cineas, "what prevents our being in peace and comfort now?"

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Up Red Banners: Saxbe's Warning of World Terrorist Conspiracy Is Based On Black Liberation Manual

WASHINGTON -- When first I visited an Argentine labor headquarters, not too long ago, I was asked to wait for the president. He'd be in shortly. I took a chair by the window. In he came. First thing the Buenos Aires union chief did was to grab my arm. Then he pushed me into a chair with its back to the wall. No sense, said he, making yourself a target.

Those were the days when the revolutionaries contented themselves with an occasional rifle shot. Or with threatening to burn down the huge paint shop of a Cordoba auto plant. When I got there the "grievance" was settled.

Since then, as Atty. Gen. William Saxbe has just warned, the revoltuion has become an international conspiracy.

At least 120 political kidnappings have occured since Jan. 1, 1973 , in the Argentine alone. Almost $30 million has been paid in ransom. Many others have been "executed" by hit-and-run people's revolutionary armies' gun squads. Killed on the streets have been an executive of a zipper plant and, on March 22, the retired head of the construction workers union.

There is no genesis. These "armies" just spring up. They splinter, silver, fraction and use automatic weapons where once the ideologists used texts and dialectics.

Bill Saxbe, whatever else he says, undoubtedly referred to a special volume when he spoke of American neo-revolutionists "taking this right out of some Maoist doctrinal textbooks on how to operate in terrorism and other forms of civil disturbance." And the text of which he spoke is the grim work of a "field marshal" of Eldridge Cleaver's Harlem-based "Black Liberation Army."

This volume was written by Don Cox, a brutal "henchman" of the intellectualized, articulate Cleaver who doesn't bother with blood on the streets. Cox is a fugitive from two murder warrants-- one in Maryland and other issued in San Francisco. He is an admitted killer. He boasts of being part of an execution squad which barged into a San Francisco police station some years ago, shooting all the time.

He relishes the moment when he and his companions fired five or six shots into an officer who died later.

This volume is "On Organizing Urban Guerrilla Units." Originally it was published in Algeria. Later it was republished in Harlem--"Babylon" to Cleaver now in self- exile somewhere in Europe. He split from the Bobby Seale Black Panther faction. And he glories in the new revolution. So does Field Marshal Don Cox, whereabouts unknown. It all got pretty bloody for the police (black and white) in several cities for a while, should anyone care to ask.

This manual was issued in 1970. It was first exposed by the House Committee on Internal Security. Few heeded. Few generally do.

There have been other manuals written by urban guerrillas for apprentice revolutionists. Few public leaders took them seriously. Few generally do. Perhaps now that Atty. Gen. Saxbe, using FBI information, has warned of new kidnappings, especially of government officials, the citizenry soon will believe this isn't the children's hour.

It's raw terrorism. Some of it's garden variety criminalism, no doubt. But it's overwhelmingly a new revolutionism, self-financed.

It trains frogmen in Australia, bushmen in Ethiopia, hijackers in Middle East hills, and dynamiters in London. There have been international. "congresses" of terrorism's theoreticians. There is a constant flow of confidential material for regional and national "congresses" to study.

It takes sophistication and an intimate knowledge of revolutionists from Lenin to Cleaver and incumbent "field marshals." That knowledge is in at least one central office -- the headquarters of the 40 - man House Internal Security Committee staff.

Its warnings and those of its chairman, Rep. Richard Ichord, have been scoffed at in the past. Now there are forces in the Congress which are attempting to wipe out the committee, throw its vast files into some attic, disperse its "knowledgeables." Why? Why should Missouri's Congressman Richard Bolling (Kansas City), who is chairman of the Select Committee on Committees of the House, move to put the internal security work under the House Committee on Government Operations? The latter group just couldn't handle the operation. It is overworked. Its staff is tiny and split over a series of subcommittees.

If Congressman Bolling doesn't believe this neo-revolutionism is a bloody game, let him look at the Argentine box score. It's all there in big red letters.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

Bringing Congress to Them

WASHINGTON-- Foreign governments in quest of U. S. benefits now use reverse lobbying. Instead of calling upon Congress, they bring the congressmen to them.

Just last January, for example, Sen. Vance Hartke, D- Ind., accompanied by his wife, his daughter and two aides, breezed through five countries in about three weeks. In each of the countries he visited, at least part of Hartke's expenses were picked up by the host government.

State Department cables reveal that in Iran, for instance, the government "informed (Hartke) that he will be the guest of (Iran) and that they will arrange program including hotel reservations and transportation."

The Pakistani government, according to the cables, provided Hartke with "hotel reservations, car and driver and transportation for Karachi to Islamabad and return."

In Ceylon, "Senator and Mrs. Hartke and daughter will be guests of (the government) with hotel, travel expenses paid." In Indonesia, the senator was a "guest of Parliament." And in New Zealand, he was also a government guest.

For spending money, according to the cables, the various U. S. embassies provided Hartke with an additional $75 a day in local currencies.

Not only members of Congress but their staff assistants have been gallivanting around the globe at the expense of foreign governments. On April 13, for instance, a dozen congressional aides will arrive in Taiwan for a vacation financed by Nationalist China.

The State Department cabled the U. S. embassy in Taipei requesting PX cards for the junketing aides "if embassy in position to issue them." The embassy replied that the aides would need "official passports" or "we will be in the rather uncomfortable position of being unable to obtain PX cards for some."

The senior staff member, Ralph Vandervort of the Senate Space Committee, told us the trip was "kind of a public relations thing" on the part of the Chiang Kai- shek government.

The few thousand dollars old Chiang spends to woo U. S. officials, judging by past performance, is money well spent. In the past four years, he has collected $373.7 million in U. S. military aid.

The South Vietnamese government has done far better, having wrangled over $1 billion in arms aid in 1973. Now the Nixon Administration has requested another $474 million in "emergency funds" for the Saigon regime.

Even as the request is pending before Congress, State Department cables reveal that the Saigon government has invited eight key congressional staff members to visit South Vietnam to view "present realities."

FOOTNOTE: Congressmen and their aides who accept free trips abroad from foreign governments may be in violation of the Constitution, which forbids U. S. officials from accepting any "emolument...of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince or foreign state."

BACKROOM POLITICS: President Nixon's wily Watergate attorney, James St. Clair, has thrown the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry into a tizzy by demanding the right to cross- examine and even subpoena witnesses.

The impeachment investigation, like a grand jury probe, is merely supposed to determine whether charges should be brought against the President. It would take a two-thirds vote of the Senate to convict him.

Defense attorneys normally don't participate in grand jury proceedings. But committee Republicans desperately want St. Clair to be involved in the impeachment investigation. With the President's counsel present, they would be relieved of the burden of defending Nixon.

Indeed, the Republicans feel so strongly that they voted 12 to 0 behind closed doors to reject the advice of their own top lawyer, Albert Jenner, who had argued against St. Clair's participation.

Committee Democrats, however, fear that St. Clair's celebrated courtroom skills could interfere with the impeachment inquiry. Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., has emphasized that the probe "is not an adversary proceeding."

In an earlier column, we reported that Jenner is being undercut by the committee's No. 2 Republican lawyer, Sam Garrison, who is working behind the scenes to obstruct the impeachment investigation.

Many observers believed Jenner, a distinguished Chicago attorney, was hired to take the Watergate onus off the Republicans. His experience and integrity, it was thought, would serve as the excuse for Republicans to move away from the President.

Instead, our sources say the senior Republican, Rep. Edward Hutchinson, R- Mich., has bypassed Jenner and given real authority over the GOP staff to Garrison.

Both Jenner and chief counsel John Doar have tried to maintain lines of communication between the Democratic and Republican staffs. But Garrison has blocked the goal of an integrated staff. He has refused to work on any of the fact-finding task forces but confines himself instead to strictly partisan efforts. He is now hard at work drafting a partisan brief on the St. Clair issue.

Material to move into new building

CHARLESTON — Brown Shoe Co. plans to move some materials into its new supply department building next week, according to Allen Guetersloh, superintendent of Factory K operations here.

Several supervisors from the St. Louis area will move to the area to supervise operations in the new 88,500-square-foot addition now nearing completion south of the Brown Shoe plant on East Marshall Street.

Guetersloh said the new operation should mean an addition of about 70 jobs to the company's payroll in Charleston. These people will be hired locally as the need for them develops, Guetersloh said. They will not be hired at one time, he added.

The supply operation will be an integral part of the local Factory K operation, Guetersloh explained.

The main part of the new steel building measures 200 by 400 feet, with a smaller portion measuring 110 by 85 feet. It will have covered loading facilities for eight trucks on the west side.

Interior of the building is entirely open space, with the exception of a relatively small office area on the northwest corner. The offices will be air conditioned, but the main portion of the building will not, Guetersloh

General contractor for the construction job is Mississippi Valley Structural Steel Co. of St. Louis. The construction contractor is Midwest Mueller Co. of St. Louis.

Cancer control month proclaimed in Sikeston

Mayor Frank Ferrell has proclaimed April Cancer Control Month in Sikeston to emphasize the need for control of the disease.

Clem Beal, chairman of the Scott County unit of the American Cancer Society, has announced a style show at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Security Federal Savings and Loan Association community room to call attention to the special month. Proceeds will go to the American Cancer Society.

Another event scheduled to raise funds for the cancer society will be a banquet May 4 at which world shot put recordholder George Woods, a Sikeston High School product, will be the special guest.

The Mayor's proclamation states that "this is the time in which all of us should give profound thought to the gravity of cancer's peril on the one hand and the hope of controlling the disease on the other."

One of four persons in Sikeston will eventually have cancer, the proclamation states, and only one of three cancer victims is now being saved.

By early detection and prompt, competent, medical treatment of the disease, the number of cures can be increased to one out of two, the proclamation states.

"The American Cancer Society is summoning all of us to participate in this life-saving work by informing everyone of cancer's warning signals and to cooperate in their program of research, education and service to cancer patients," the proclamation adds.

Ann Landers

Snoring problem eased by exercise

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago, I was on the verge of a nervous breakdown because I couldn't get a night's sleep. My husband's snoring was getting louder and louder. I couldn't understand how he could sleep through that horrendous racket.

One day a friend suggested something she had learned in yoga class. It solved the problem for her. It is called alternate -nostril breathing, and it works!

Now when I say, "Honey please do the breathing exercise," he closes one nostril with his thumb and breathes four times. Then he closes the other nostril and breathees four times After five rounds, he is sound asleep --and so am I. --Forty Winks

Dear Winks: Here's your letter and I'd be interested in hearing from readers who have tried it.

Dear Ann Landers: Four years ago, I married a fine man for companionship. It seemed like a sensible arrangement for two people in our mid -60s. His wife had passed on within weeks of my husband.

I had a modest amount of money and my second husband and I have made some good investments. I never had children of my own, but I have two nieces and a nephew I love dearly. My husband has one daughter who has resented me from the day I married her father. She has a well -to -do husband and two fine youngsters. I can't understand why she hates me so.

Last week her father had a bad cold, nothing really serious. She took me aside and said, "If anything happens to father I want you to know that I am his sole heir."

I was so hurt by her remark I did not reply. I hesitate to say anything to my husband for fear he will think I am critical of her. Furthermore, I would not want to start trouble in the family. Please advise me. I am --Very Upset

Dear V.U.: Say nothing to your husband about his daughter's crude remark. But, if you haven't seen a lawyer about the rightful distribution of his estate (and yours), by all means do so the first thing tomorrow morning.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm becoming serious about a man who is a junior partner in one of the city's most distinguished law firms. Greg wants me to go with him to select a ring. I have another year of college ahead of me and don't feel I'm ready to make the commitment. I must confess Greg turns me on and is terrific company. We see each other only weekends because I'm a serious student, carrying a double major. Greg keeps saying he's dying of loneliness.

A friend of my brother works in the same law firm and tells quite another story. It seems Greg rarely gets to the office before noon, his eyes looking like two tomatoes. He apparently is chasing around five nights a week with an assortment of dollies.

When I asked him about it he said, "Yes, I do go out, but only with sex -starved clients (mostly widows) who run after me. It's strictly business."

I'd hate to be made a fool of. What is your opinion? --Linda

Dear Linda: A healthy young man should be able to run faster that any sex -starved widow. Tell him you'll consider marriage after you've finished your education and he has finished his fooling around.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen Age Sex --Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50c in coin and a long, self -addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Bobcats club SCCHS

MORLEY — The Delta Bobcats baseballers literally bombed the Scott County Central Braves here Friday afternoon to the tune of 17-0.

The Braves defense offered little defense and the pitching of loser McGhee allowed a total of 12 base hits in the six innings played.

The Bobcats paraded around the basepaths in the top of the first inning scoring four times before the rally could be put down. The second inning was nearly the same as Delta crossed the plate two more times to take a comfortable 2-0 lead.

Scott Central had their hands full trying to slug the fastball of David Duncan and collected only four safties in the game.

Delta was unable to score again until the tip of the sixth inning when the Bobcats put their offense to work once again and scored 11 times to end the game.

Rightfielder Keith Cook blasted four hits in the game including a triple. Mike Kelly, Carson Kelly, and Crader also slammed triples in the game.

AMATIS LOANED TO TOKYO QUARTET

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Corcoran Gallery, which 11 years ago was bequeathed four Amati instruments by Mrs. William Andrews Clark, widow of the Montana senator, has loaned the instruments to the Tokyo String Quartet.

Dogs blank KHS

An impressive pitching performance by junior righthander Kenny Stokes and a less- than - impressive performance by Kelly fielders spelled win for the Sikeston Bulldogs Friday afternoon. The pitcher's duel was won by Sikeston 2-0, as Stokes allowed just two hits and fanned eight in his five innings of hurling. His mound opponent, Jeff Jackson, lasted just two innings before his strong right arm tightened up. For the rest of the game Kelly got scoreless relief work from Kenny Urhahn, but Sikeston had counted twice off Jackson and threatened to score just once.

Sikeston scored one run each in the first two frames and for all intents and purposes the game was over. However, the very good-sized crowd that braved 40 degree temperatures was treated to a very well played game. Defense was sparkling throughout the contest, admittedly more so when the gray-clad Bulldogs were in the field.

The first defensive gem came in the first inning. With one out, Urhahn bounced a hard bunt into a good place and beat a hurried throw from thirdbaseman Bruce Lawrence. However, the next batter hit a sharp grounder to Lawrence at third. He gave a strong, good throw to Bill Schatzley at second and the Sikeston second sacker's relay peg to first had the Hawk runner by plenty to give Sikeston its third around - the - horn double play in three games.

In their half of the first Sikeston scored for the first time, and the action again began with one out. This time it was the Sikeston shortstop, Rick Eisenbach, who ripped a hanging curve from Jackson up the middle for a base hit. After John Leible walked, Stokes hit a hard grounder to the firstbaseman Bob Jackson. Jackson made a bad throw to second and Eisenbach crossed the plate.

After the first inning, Kelly never threatened Stokes again. But, the Bulldogs came up with another, eventually unneeded run, in the bottom of the second.

This time with one out, Donny Taylor reached base when catcher Ronny Schlosser dropped the ball as Taylor fanned on a bad pitch. Walker sacrificed him to second and the Sikeston centerfielder crossed the plate as Jackson left the base too soon on a throw from short.

The crowd shivered in silence for most of the rest of the game, until Stokes was removed in the fifth. Reliever Richard Blankenship, obviously bothered by the cold and not completely warmed up, ran into control problem in the sixth, but was bailed out by sparkling defensive plays by Leible and Eisenbach. Then Blankenship retired the side in the seventh to save the win for Stokes.

It was the first outing of the year for the hard- firing Stokes and, of course, was his first win. Sikeston's record is 3-0. Kelly now stands at 2-2.

Mitch Walker had the only extra- base hit of the game -- a double when the rightfielder misjudged his fly in the fourth.

Sikeston next game will be next Monday at Hayti.

Urhahn finished the five inning game with 11 strike-outs and three walks. Anderson was charged with the loss for the Eagles.

The Hawks set up a very convincing lead in the top of the first inning as they crossed the plate for seven runs.

Kelly tacked on another two runs in the top of the top on the third inning and the tenth run came at the top of the fifth.

The batting power for the Hawks was supplied by teammates Braser, Jackson and Burger.

Braser smacked the ball for three singles that brought in two runs. Jackson hit the only double of the game in the first inning Jackson and Burger teamed up to drive in four runs in the first inning as Jackson hit a double and Burger produced the only triple.

Wyatt qualifies for flood insurance

WYATT — The Department of Housing and Urban Development has qualified the city of Wyatt for subsidized flood insurance, effective April 2, according to 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison.

Burlison explained that all structures used for residential, business, religious or agricultural purposes, structures occupied by nonprofit organizations, and structures owned by state or local government or their agencies, are eligible for flood insurance coverage.

The Cape Girardeau Democrat noted that Wyatt became qualified under this program when it agreed to adopt land use and control measures that will minimize flood damage to future construction. Local insurance agents may obtain policies and other information from the National Flood Insurers Association servicing office, which is the MFA Insurance Companies, 1817 West Broadway, Columbia, Missouri 65201.

The case of the birdbrained secretary

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Curvaceous Clara moved from lap to lap until she was secretary to the president of a big corporation. When she got there, her primary job, businesswise, was to sort out her boss' mail and to examine the contents thereof. One letter that she filed in the wastebasket, however, contained additional terms to an important contract that had been entered into between the corporation and a certain Mr. Blum. And, when the corporation failed to perform those additional terms, Blum began to fume and sued the corporation for damages resulting from its nonperformance.

"We can't be held responsible," insisted the president of the corporation in court. "The only one who ever saw those additional terms was my secretary and, like most secretaries, she's got all she can do to find her way to work each morning."

"Because his secretary may have been a birdbrain," retorted Mr. Blum, "is no defense to my lawsuit. Since she received the letter, the corporation was bound by its contents."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the corporation liable because of its birdbrained secretary?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that a corporation cannot disclaim knowledge of the contents of a letter which is addressed to the corporation, and to the attention of the president, even if it is viewed only by the president's secretary where the president does not choose to read his mail but delegates that duty to his secretary.

Easy To Lose Lbs. Fast With New Vitamin 'E' Diet

HOLLYWOOD (Special)- New scientific discoveries have produced a Vitamin E diet that quickly works wonders on overweight people. and reportedly is gaining great popularity across the country with glowing reports of easy weight loss "while still eating almost as much as you want.

Those who follow the simple Vitamin E diet report an average loss of at least a pound a day and even more without exercise or starvation. Nutritionists' files are bulging with happy testimonials from formerly overweight people who are now trim and slim again. Best of all, you can still eat almost as much as you want of the 'forbidden foods' like steak, chicken, fish sauces, gravies, bacon & eggs and still lose weight.

Chewable (candy-like) vitamin E tablets, as used in the diet plan, contain a new scientific combination of ingredients that quickly curbs and controls the appetite, while also giving the wonderous benefits of Vitamin E which is so essential to good health.

The use of the new Vitamin E Diet tablets and foods prescribed in the plan will, through natural action, act to help your body use up excess fat. According to recent clinical test, a person who is deficient in Vitamin E or Protein "will double the speed of fat utilization" with the use of Vitamin E.

Nearly 60,000 acres surveyed in county

Soil Scientist

It has been eight months since a soil survey began in Scott County. Nearly 60,000 acres of the county has been mapped by the survey during this time. Since last Aug. 1, soil scientists have been walking over the northern and southern parts of the county, boring holes, examining soil horizons, describing soil profiles, measuring thickness of topsoil and steepness of slopes and plotting this information on aerial photographs.

Working on the survey are Mark Taake, Bill Knight and Burton Brown.

Twenty different soils have been identified and described so far. It is estimated that more than 40 soils will be identified before the survey is completed.

Soil surveys are used as a basic tool in planning the wise use of land. For many years soil surveys have been used in resource conservation farm planning. Presently, 252 farms in Scott County have conservation plans. Soil surveys are also playing an important part in urban planning, the development of zoning ordinances, evaluating rural real estate and establishing guidance for engineering uses of soils, recreation, wildlife and woodland.

Soil surveys also have been used to evaluate soils as sites for ponds, lakes, sanitary landfills, septic tank filter fields, sewage lagoons, buildings, roads, streets and to determine erosion and sediment potential, runoff and many other uses. Many land use changes are taking palce in Scott County. These should be planned with consideration of the suitability of the soil, its limitations and hazards.

The soil survey was started as a cooperative agreement between the Scott County Soil and Water Conservation District and the U. S. Soil Conservation Service on Aug. 1, 1973.

The County Court, some cities and various individuals supported the survey by providing funds to hire a district soil scientist. The cities that financially supported the soil survey have been given priority in mapping.

Since the survey started, major emphasis has been placed on training members of the survey party, identifying and describing the soils and gathering pertinent information about each soil. During the coming year the major emphasis will be on mapping acres.

There is a continual need, however, to study and record information and describe the soils.

The black area, shown on this map of Scott County, indicates the location where soil surveys have been completed. Surveys have been completed on 60,000 acres.

More herbicides may be used by soybean growers

By JOE H. SCOTT
State Extension Agronomist

Cotton planting time in the Bootheel is only a few days away. Land preparation has been interupted by frequent showers. However, we are farther ahead than we were this time last year.

Still getting reports that growers can't get preplant soil incorporated herbicides for their cotton crop. We will have more cotton with a single treatment of a pre- emergence surface applied herbicides such as diuron (Karmex or Dynex) and fluometuron (Cotoran or Lanex) than in the past. Good weed control can be obtained with these treatments.

Growers will need to watch their fields more closely. If weeds emerge before a rain is received to activate the pre-emergence herbicides other control practices will have to be used. Kill the weeds with a rotary hoe, cultivation or postemergence herbicides while they are small. Do not wait for the surface- applied herbicides to kill them, as once the weeds are up and have put down a root system, few if any of them will be killed by the pre-emergence herbicide.

Soybean growers have more pre- emergence surface applied herbicides to select from than cotton growers. But there is likely to be a short supply of these with 55 million acres of soybeans to be planted in United States. Also some of the same herbicides are used by corn growers.

Still time to kill weeds in wheat

About two- thirds of the wheat has been topdressed with nitrogen. It will be questionable if the other one-third will get topdressed. Nitrogen can be applied up until early April, but the yield will not be as good as if applied earlier.

The wheat that has been topdressed has responded to the nitrogen and warm weather and is growing rapidly. The important thing is to keep it that way for top yield and quality. Grain buyers tell us the dock penalty is expected to be pretty heavy for wheat contaminated with vetch, garlic and wild onions.

Vetch, mustard and dock can be controlled by applying one half to three fourth pound per acre of 2,4-D acid equivalent. The lower rate is for ester form of 2,4-D and the higher rate is for the amine form. The amine form is less injurious than the ester form.

Garlic and onion are harder to control. If these are present in your wheat, apply three fourth to one pound per acre of 2,4-D acid equivalent in the ester form. Low volatile esters should be used to avoid drift and penetrate down to the garlic and onions. This treatment will not kill the garlic but will prevent aerial bublet formation.

Applications can be made from tillering to the boot stage. Do not apply before plants are four inches tall or during the boot to dough stage of kernel development. Such applications will result in reduced yields.

Best results can be expected if the 2,4-D is applied after tillering on warm, sunny days when the temperature is above 60 degrees and no rain expected for 12 hours. Also, 2,4-D mixes well with liquid nitrogen and can be applied at the same time if temperature is high enough for 2,4-D to work.

The above treatments may kill clover or lespedeza underseeded in the wheat unless the wheat and weeds are large enough to afford protection from the 2,4-D. All forms of 2,4-D should be applied with extreme caution to prevent drift to sensitive crops. Cotton, tomatoes, grapes and legumes are very sensitive.

Several farmers called our offices Monday and they were concerned about the recent cold weather damage to their wheat. Well, we don't know exactly how much damage has been done, but it could vary from 0 to 20 per cent.

Some of the Delta Center researchers have observed the damaged wheat under the microscope and found little damage. It is certain the taller wheat has been damaged more than the smaller wheat. If the growing point of the wheat is above ground level it is susceptible to cold damage. Most of our wheat was past his stage so some damage has occurred.

It will be a few days before the full extent of the damage is fully known. We may not completely know until harvest. There isn't anything that can be done to overcome the damage so we will just need to wait and see how the wheat recovers.

Contact a local area agronomy specialist for further information. He will be in touch with the situation and can keep you informed.

Farmland turns to Canada for natural gas

KANSAS CITY (AP)— A big farm cooperative has turned to Canada for the natural gas it needs to produce nitrogen fertilizer, and plans to spend $400 million to manufacture it there and pipe it into the United States.

Farland Industries Inc. said Friday it hopes to have two plants operating near Calgary, Alta., late in 1976 and two more by 1978 or 1979.

Farmland is the big Kansas City- based manufacturing and wholesaling cooperative which serves local farm co- ops in 15 states between Minnesota and Texas and Illinois and Colorado.

Ernest T. Lindsey, Farmland's president, said it turned to Canada because it was able to get a 30- year commitment for 200 million cubic feet of natural gas a day.

At Enid, Okla., it is just getting into production with one of the last two nitrogen fertilizer plants which will probably be built in the United States because of the depletion of the country's natural gas reserves.

"Our joint venture with Canada will free U. S. gas for such vital jobs as home heating, even as we produce more fertilizer for our farmers," Lindsey said.

The scheme includes a new 1,600- mile pipeline between Lethbridge in Canada and a connection with Farmland's present pipeline system at Garner on the north border of Iowa.

The present system will carry the liquid anhydrous ammonia through Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma to Perryton, in the Texas panhandle. Farmland also refines gasoline, diesel fuel, lubricants and propane.

The four fertilizer plants near Calgary are expected to cost about $325 million and the pipeline improvements about $75 million.

Each of the four plants will have a capacity of 1,250tons a day, and when they all get into operation they will produce at the rate of 1.5 million tons a year.

Warren Dewlen, Farmland's vice president for fertilizer, estimates the 15 states which it serves use 35 to 40 per cent of the nitrogen fertilizer which U. S. farmers put on their crops.

With the demand for fertilizer up and the supply of natural gas dwindling, some authorities are predicting a practical shortage of up to 30 per cent this year. They also say that one- third of the nation's food production can be attributed directly to the use of fertilizer.

Mule power turns dirt

Fred V. Heinkel, between mules, president of the Missouri Farmers Association, appropriately uses a plow to turn the first dirt for a replica of the one-room Newcomer School. Sixty years ago seven Chariton county farmers met at the Newcomer School near Brunswick and pooled their order to purchase binder twine. From this beginning the MFA has grown to be a large farmer owned business and to become a farm organization with more than 152,000 members. The school house is being constructed on the grounds of the MFA Insurance companies. The grounds will be landscaped and the building will house artifacts typical of early rural school.

Cotton herbicides are examined

By THOMAS A. BROWN, JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

Cotton planting time is almost here, and many farmers are wondering which herbicide to use for chemical weed control in this crop this year. Let's take a brief look at the herbicides recommended for pre- plant and pre- emergence weed control in cotton by the University of Missouri College of Agriculture.

Preplant or Pre- emergence

Paraquat is recommended as a preplant treatment for the control of most annual grasses and will kill the foliage of perennial weeds. It should be applied after weeds come up but before planting cotton. This practice is more adapted to bedded land where there is a need to control growing weeds without working the beds.

NSMA + surfactant is also recommended as a preplant treatment for the control of annual broadleaf weeds and grasses. When planting is delayed after a seedbed is prepared, this treatment can be used to control weeds that have emerged without reworking the seedbed.

This application should be made when weeds are small, as control of weeds four inches tall or larger may not be adequate especially if the stand is thick. Cotton can be planted just before or shortly after spraying. Reliability of weed control by MSMA decreases when the temperature is below 70 degrees.

Trifluralin (Treflan) is recommended as a preplant, incorporated treatment on a wide variety of soils. It gives good control of most grasses and some small- seeded annual broadleaf weeds, including pigweed. It does not effectively control prickly sida, cocklebur, morning glory, ragweed, velvetleaf, jimsonweed and nutgrass.

Trifluralin should be incorporated into the soil as soon as possible, preferably within eight hours after application. Variable control will probably result from delayed application especially if applied to a wet, warm soil or when the wind velocity is high.

If land is to be bedded, herbicide placement can be gauged more accurately if application and incorporation are performed after beds have been formed and dragged down.

Nitralin (Planavin) is also recommended as a preplant, incorporated treatment. The information outlined for trifluralin above also applies to nitralin. This chemical should be incorporated within 48 hours after application. For best results, it should not be incorporated over 1 1/2 inches deep.

Diuron (Karmex) is recommended for a pre-emergence application on loam soils. It will give good control of most common grasses and annual broadleaf weeds for six weeks. It gives fair control of Johnson grass seedlings and prickly sida and poor control of nutgrass and velvetleaf.

Rainfall within a week to 10 days after application is necessary for good results. Diuron is not recommended for use on light sand or heavy clay soils with a high organic matter content.

Fluometuron (Cotoran or Lanex), when used as a pre-emergence application will give good control of most annual grasses and broadleaf weeds except nutgrass, velvet leaf and Johnsongrass seedlings. It can be applied to the soil surface or lightly incorporated into the soil after planting.

Prepiant Plus Pre- emergence

Some herbicides complement each other, and combinations of preplant and pre- emergence herbicides are recommended for more effective control in some cases. In fields having a severe infestation of both grasses and broadleaf weeds, such a combination may be beneficial.

In such cases, either trifluralin or nitralin, is recommended as a preplant incorporated treatment followed by a pre- emergence application of either diuron or fluometuron.

A UMC Guide, titled "1974 Recommendations for Weed Control in Cotton," which is available upon request at county University of Missouri Extension Centers, gives detailed information pertaining to chemical weed control in cotton, including recommended rates of application for each of the recommended herbicides.

Corn borers give vital information

COLUMBIA-- You might wonder about a fellow who spends his time raising the most destructive insects ever to hit the Southern Corn Belt.

But G. M. (Mike) Chippendale claims "his" southwestern corn borers are giving him the kinds of information that could seal the doom of these pests that have toppled corn stalks in 13 states from Arizona to Missouri to Alabama.

By raising about 2,000 borers a month on artificial diets, the University of Missouri- Columbia entomologist can manipulate their life cycle.

Chippendale figures the "weak link" in the borer's life cycle and the key to its control may be in its eight- month hibernation period from September to May.

Just recently, he learned that the borer hibernates because it continues to produce a "juvenile hormone" that keeps it from maturing. Now he hopes to give hibernating borers an extra dose of hormone so they won't wake up.

"If we could extend hibernation for a month, we could disrupt the insect's life cycle and control it," he explains. "This could be done with a chemical relative of the juvenile hormone."

While that finding represents a major breakthrough in understanding insect hibernation, Chippendale doesn't plan to stop there.

He's also trying to find out why the adult moth lays her eggs on the corn leaf and what causes the borers to start feeding there.

"It probably has something to do with chemical attractants in the corn plant," says Chippendale. "As we learn more about these chemicals, geneticists have a better chance to breed resistant varieties.

And he's studying the chemistry of the different organs of the borer. "If we can uncover a metabolic system that is unique to insects," he says, "we could develop an inhibitor that will control insects without affecting other animals."

As Chippendale studies borer physiology and its response to temperature and daylength, he is able to predict insect population and distribution. This helps farmers and others who are trying to protect their fields against the borer.

"In Missouri, we're purshing the northern limits of its distribution," explains Chippendale. "About 80 per cent of the borers die off because the winters are too cold. If this didn't happen, we'd really have a problem!"

The southwestern corn borer first came into this country from Mexico in 1913. Since then, it's spread throughout the Southern Corn Belt, but has not moved into the northern states.

Cotton planting time around the corner

By THOMAS A. BROWN, JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

Cotton planting time is just around the corner, and a number of farmers are wondering what variety of cotton to plant this season. An idea as to the comparative productivity of various cotton varieties tested in research plots in Southeast Missouri may be obtained from averages included in this article.

The average yields of the various varieties produced on a sandy loam, wilt- free, non-irrigated soil in Southeast Missouri during the three- year period 1969- 1971 by variety and average lint yield per acre in pounds, include:

Deloctt 266, 1,084; Stoneville 213, 1,062; Coker 310, 1,037; Stoneville 7A, 1,009; Deltapine 16, 998; Deltapine 45A, 967; Auburn M, 961; Rex Smoothleaf 66, 954; and MO- DEL, 919.

Average yields produced on a heavy clay (gumbo), wilt-free irrigated soil in Southeast Missouri during the 1969- 1971 period, by variety and yield in pounds, are as follows:

Deltapine 16, 752; Delcott 277, 751; Stoneville 7A, 735; Stoneville 213, 734; Coker 310, 714; Deltapine 45A, 709; Rex Smoothleaf 66, 671; MO-DEL, 593; Auburn M, 578.

Fertilizer situation is still serious

By JOHN GARRETT
Area Agronomy Specialist

The fertilizer situation is still serious and is expected to remain this way until late June or July. There are fertilizer plants in the area that have not had any fertilizer all winter. A few plants have a fair amount of mixed fertilizer on hand at the present time. Most of this will be used as soon as weather permits.

Nitrogen is in extremely short supply. Most dealers are expecting to have sufficient N for their customers, but no guarantees are being made.

Anhydrous ammonia is the main source of N used in corn production. Corn acreage was expected to be increased this year, but the nitrogen shortage has caused many farmers to change their minds and turn to soybeans or grain sorghum.

Urea, ammonium nitrate, or solution nitrogen are just as good as anhydrous ammonia for corn, but the price will be double or triple per pound of actual N.

Without nitrogen you can expect corn to yield about 50 bushels per acre, so this tells me that if you don't have or can't get N by planting time, don't plant corn. If you can find some anhydrous, you should start applying as soon as the ground is dry enough. In this year of shortages nitrogen should be applied when you can get it.

The following suggestions may help you stretch your fertilizer supply a little further.

1. Establish realistic yield goals. With short supplies and higher prices, this may be the year to remain status quo as far as average yields are concerned.

2. Make every pound of fertilizer you apply count. Soil test and apply fertilizer as recommended.

3. Lime acid soils. If soil pH is 5.5 or below, fertilizer efficiency is reduced and you do not get full benefits out of what is applied.

4. Conserve available nitrogen supplies. Use no more N than required to meet established yield goals.

5. Conserve phosphate and potash supplies. Utilize soil tests to determine minimum requirements on all fields. If your soil tests 151 pounds phosphate or above, you can get by without applying any phosphate for one or two years with no decrease in yields.

6. Order fertilizer early and begin spreading soon as it is available.

7. Band fertilizer. Fertilizer rate can be reduced approximately one-third if banded.

8. Utilize animal manures if available. The nutrient content of animal manure varies, but will average about 4-2-6, N P205 + K20 per ton applied. To maximize efficiency and decrease odor, incorporate manure into the soil soon after application.

9. Watch planting rates. Adjust corn planting rates to fit yeild potential and N supply. About 14,000 to 16,000 plants per acre are adequate for 100 to 125 bushels per acre with 100 to 125 pounds nitrogen.

10. Plant on time if possible. Plant corn in April, milo in May, cotton May 1-15 and soybeans May to late June.

11. Select a high yielding adapted variety.

12. Apply recommended herbicides at proper rate and time to control weeds.

13. Band or broadcast adequate phosphate and potash.

14. Apply 100 to 120 pounds total N and not over 150 pounds per acre. The greatest increase from N comes from the first 75 pounds. The increase is gradual from 75 to 150 pounds per acre. It will be better to apply 75 to 100 pounds N per acre and plant more acres than to apply 150 pounds on fewer acres in this year of short supply. One hundred pounds of N per acre will produce approximately 100 bushesl per acre with 16,000 to 17,000 plants per acre.

Rate increase is suspended

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A water rate increase requested by Missouri Public Service Co. for Clinton, Osceola and Nevada was suspended Wednesday for investigation and hearing by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

The proposed rates, which would increase gross annual revenues from the firm's water service by some $225,000, were suspended for 120 days beyond April 8, their effective date, with the PSC able to suspend them for an additional six months if necessary.

The company was directed to present testimony and exhibits in support of the rate hike on May 21. Any intervenors and the PSC staff will be permitted to present evidence at a later date, a spokesman said.

Probe into welfare fraud to resume

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A special Missouri House committee will resume its investigation into alleged welfare fraud and mismanagement when it meets Thursday in Kansas City.

Missouri Auditor John D. Ashcroft and officials of the U. S. Health, Education and Welfare Department also plan to begin an audit of the state welfare division in two weeks.

Welfare division figures show the overpayment rate for welfare and food stamp recipients was 14 per cent during a 1973 test period.

In addition, 7 per cent of those receiving welfare and food stamp payments were ineligible. Missouri ranks 21st among all states in the amount of error in welfare payments.

The Senate plans to resume its investigation of the Welfare Division after the legislative session is over.

Rep. Russell Goard, D-St. Louis, chairman of the House Welfare and Medicaid Committee, has introduced a resolution calling for a joint HouseSenate investigating committee.

"Welfare problems result from several factors," says Goward. "Two of the most important are new programs initiated by the federal government and continual changes in federal regulations. However, the state also has some problems in the areas of number of caseloads per worker as well as the rapid turnover of welfare division employes."

Rep. James Russell, D-Florissant, chairman of the House Approrpiations Committee, said the Missouri Welfare program costs about $340 million annually of which 45 per cent comes from state funds.

Harbin reports on school project

Supt. Sam Harbin

Supt. Sam Harbin related to the Sikeston Rotary Club some of the activities and results of a project to assess the educational program of Sikeston schools Monday night at Ramada Inn.

The project, to date, has involved about 1,300 students, parents and teachers in a general opinion survey of the school system, a one- day workshop last October involving all teachers, about 50 students and parents, a State Department of Education consultant and 10 faculty members from Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

Also, part of last fall's three- day orientation session for teachers was devoted to the project with consultants from the State Department of Education and representatives from Southeast Missouri.

Future plans for the current school year outlined by Harbin include participation in a statewide assessment test prepared by an organization for educational accountability. Only 72 schools of over 600 in the state were invited to participate in the test.

Also, he said one more workshop is planned on the afternoon of April 25. Participants in the workshop will be all teachers and as many students and parents who want to participate. He said parents and other adults who want to participate should phone the board of education office, 471-4454.

Harbin indicated the results of the survey show varying opinions among the 30 groups who completed the survey. In most cases the variance is not too wide.

However, in some cases, such as: board of education policies, feeling of cooperation between school and community, parent participation, grouping, home work, grading, discipline, student attitudes, sports, career development and others; the opinions vary enough that a workshop including students, parents and teachers would be valuable, he stated.

Summarizing, Harbin said accountability was not only a responsibility of the school system, but that parents, the business community and all citizens of the district have an obligation to cooperate and support the schools in providing quality educational opportunities for the students.

"I called the Social Security office and the county welfare office both twice and told them I had received too much," she said. "I was told it was okay to cash it, the money was mine. I still waited two weeks before I cashed it."

She received no state check in February, but did get her normal SSI checks for the two months, however.

"I'm just bogged down in bills," she said. "Most of my money goes for doctors and drugs because I take 12 to 15 different kinds of drugs. A friend had to loan me money to pay my rent.

"If this keeps on very long or if I have to pay money back to the government, I don't know what I'll do," she said.

A Kansas City man who has been unable to work regularly since an injury three years ago said he and his blind wife received help last month from friends, the Metro Lutheran Ministry and the Salvation Army. "But," he said, "we can't keep that up."

The couple received a federal overpayment in February but no state checks since then.

"If this isn't cleared up soon, I don't know what we can do," the husband said. "We aren't going to quit, though."

The couple took its problem to the office of Lt. Gov. William Phelps, who acts as the state's ombudsman.

An aide, Sid Rogers, said he has been working with state welfare officials to get the March and April payments sent as quickly as possible and then to solve the February problem later.

On the other side of the coin is a 50-year-old blind Kansas City man, who has a job as a darkroom technician.

"I'm not eligible for SSI payments because of my income level. But I kept getting the checks, including the one with the overpayment, and I kept sending them back and kept telling those Social Security people that I wasn't eligible for them.

"They kept telling me I was blind so I was eligible, but I knew I wasn't. I knew if I spent my check I'd have to pay if back sometime," he said, adding that it took three months to stop his SSI payments, which amounted to $140 a month. He said he is still trying to get the small monthly SSI payments to his wife stopped.

"I want only what I'm eligible for," he said. "We get state payments and we're eligible for them."

Officials in the state and federal offices said that recipients "in the long run will be maintained at the December level of income," before the federal program took over, but there was no indication when the February foulup would be cleared up.

"What's facing these people, who are having trouble making a living anyway, is a drop in some future payments," the lieutenant-governor's assistant said.

Park plans discussed by Charleston board

CHARLESTON — Plans for Charleston's new "Lincoln Park" were discussed Monday night at City Hall by the city Park and Recreation Board.

The city agency has leased the park grounds from the Urban Renewal Authority for 20 years, and is making improvements in paving, ball courts, fencing and lighting for outdoor activities.

The Lincoln Community Center is being remodeled to house various indoor activities, including tutoring, recreation, day care, senior citizens' "meals on wheels", and other activities, as well as the offices of the urban renewal and housing authorities.

Guests of the park board were Bob and Pat Goulson, Volunteers in Service to America workers recently assigned to Charleston, who will assist with some of the projects at the Lincoln Center.

The board heard reports on summer activities in the parks, which this year will include Little League, Babe Ruth League for 13 - to 15 - year - olds; Senior Babe Ruth teams, for 16-18; Girls' softball, for 13-15; and men's softball league. If enough are interested, a women's league may be developed.

There will be swimming and tennis lessons. Prices, hours and schedules will be announced later.

The board reminded the public that the speed limit for entering and driving at Bennie Hillhouse Park is 15 miles per hour. Fishing in Hequembourg Park is open only for those under 16 and over 60 years of age, although anyone may picnic or play there.

Charleston now has 51 acres in four parks; three baseball diamonds, two softball diamonds, (all lighted); one volleyball court; two basketball courts; and four tennis courts. There are picnic tables at each park. Recently a horseshoe game was added at Rolwing park, near the shelter, where participants may rest in the shade.

Phelps ruining Bond's 'kiddie corps image'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps turned 40 Friday.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who is 35, remarked to Phelps at a reception in Phelps office, "you're knocking heck out of the kiddie corps image."

Most of Bond's staff members and key appointees are under 40. State Auditor John Ashcroft will be 32 on May 9. Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth is 37. The Democratic state office holders, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick and State Treasurer James Spainhower, are 68 and 44, respectively.

Controls take new setback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Banking Committee dealt a probably fatal blow Friday to the Nixon administration's hopes to extend the Cost of Living Council beyond April 30.

By a 21-10 vote, the committee tabled all legislation concerning wage and price controls, the Economic Stabilization Act and the extension of the council.

The Senate already has killed all pending controls bills.

The size of the vote indicated attempts to resuscitate controls legislation would face stiff resistance.

Rep. William B. Widnall, R-Pa., objected even to having a meeting on the subject, since the majority of the committee had opposed extending the council or mandatory controls over health and construction industries, which the administration had also requested.

Reps. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, and William S. Moorhead, D-Pa., pushed for some form of standby authority to permit reimposition of controls if inflation worsens.

The administration originally hoped to get Congress to extend mandatory wage and price controls over health and some other industries. This week, however, director John T. Dunlop said the council would accept a bill proposed by Rep. J. William Stanton, R-Ohio, which would end controls but keep the council alive as a research and data-gathering agency with a mandate to monitor previous wage-price agreements.

In its present form, the council administers wage and price controls.

Bomb call turns up nothing

MALDEN — The Malden IGA Foodliner received a telephone call at approximately 6:20 p.m. Friday stating a bomb had been placed in the building. However, a search conducted by Malden police failed to locate a bomb.

The bomb threat was the second received in Malden this week.

The first one came Wednesday when the superintendent of Malden schools received a telephone call from a male caller stating that a bomb had been placed in the Malden High School building.

Again a search failed to turn up a bomb.

Corn-planting season arrives

James Pobst, Route Four, is one of several area farmers who are starting to get seed corn into the ground for this year's crop. Pobst was planting part of his 10 acres of corn today on his farm three miles north of Sikeston. (Daily Standard photo)

Many blind and disabled persons short changed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A middle-aged woman who is blind and suffering from diabetes and multiple sclerosis has found her welfare checks cut by nearly one-third.

The reduction has left her in a quandary over what to do about her sizable doctor and drug bills.

A blind woman and her husband, who has a limited disability and requires frequent medical care, have had their aid payments cut by a similar amount.

They have been forced to rely on relatives, friends and private relief agencies to help them with doctor bills, rent payments and grocery bills.

They are among hundreds of blind Missourians caught in a financial bind since the federal government assumed certain aid payments to the blind, disabled and aged at the first of the year. Government officials say their plight is temporary.

The federal program, called Supplementary Security Income, is administered by the Social Security Administration. The state of Missouri had administered such aid programs in the past. And the state agreed to make up the difference if a recipient received less under the new federal plan.

The changeover apparently went smoothly during the first month, but the program fell apart in February.

The federal SSI payments to many blind Missouri recipients were more than they should have been — with the overpayment varying from a few dollars to as much as $200.

Some recipients returned the higher checks. Others tried to return the checks and were told the money was theirs. And still others spent the money, perhaps thinking they were entitled to higher payments under the federal program.

The federal overpayment in February has left the aid to the blind program in a bureaucratic quagmire.

Because of the higher federal payments, the state checks were reduced or cut out entirely, and officials in the Missouri Welfare Department say they haven't worked out a solution yet. The federal payments were returned to their normal level last month, but state checks still have not been sent to recipients who received overpayments on their federal checks.

Eldo Throckmorton, assistant chief of the Bureau of Family and Children's Services in the state office, said this week he was hopeful of getting state supplemental checks covering March and April in the mail in a couple weeks.

Tom Riat, assistant district manager for the Social Security Administration in Kansas City, said the federal government has made no decision on trying to recover its February overpayments, which apparently resulted from the transfer of data from the state program to the federal. Throckmorton said the state will wait for the federal decision before making a determination about how to proceed with its stalled February payments.

Throckmorton said there were about 400 blind Missouri residents affected by the foulup, mostly in the Kansas City and Joplin areas, with a scattereing of others in St. Louis and the rest of the state.

Riat said the other three states in his district — Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska — were not affected.

A 40-year-old Kansas City blind woman, suffering from diabetes and multiple sclerosis, is supposed to receive about $45 from SSI, $94 from the state and another $114 in disability benefits each month. In February, her SSI check was about $100 higher than usual.

2 receive serious injuries

Two persons received serious injuries in separate traffic accidents on area roads Friday, according to the highway patrol.

The first accident occurred at 11:55 a.m. Friday at the intersection of Highways 51 and 72 near Patton when Whitney Kempton, 77, of Refugio failed to stop his northbound car at a stop sign and struck an eastbound tractor-trailer truck driven by Donald Cooper, 36, of Fridericktown.

Kempton was taken to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau for treatment os serious injuries.

Dossie Lee Chalmers, 41, of Clarksville, Ark., was seriously injured at 12:30 p.m. Friday five miles south of Gobler on Route NN when he lost control of his automobile which overturned in a ditch.

Chalmers was taken to Dunklin County Memorial Hospital, then transferred to John Gaston hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Nixon in Paris

PARIS (AP) — President Nixon arrived Friday night to attend the memorial Mass for President George Pompidou.

"Pompidou was a man of extraordinary intelligence, of dedication to duty and above all of indomitable courage," Nixon said.

Donated money to be returned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any money donated to President Nixon to help pay his income tax will be returned, a White House spokesman said Friday.

The comment came as various campaigns were launched around the country to send money to the President.

The Florida state Republican chairman, L.E. "Tommy" Thomas, said he wanted one million Floridians to mail $1 to the White House "and let the President know that you think he is one in a million."

A group in Kentucky reported it has raised more than $250 for a "Peoples Fund for Nixon's Taxes."

The White House said it has received more than a dozen telephone offers to help the President. A spokesman said callers were being discouraged from sending money and that any money actually received would be returned.

"If anybody sends money in the mail to the White House it is returned to them in the form of a check, cash or whatever it is," said the spokesman.

The Internal Revenue Service said in the event donations were used to help pay the President's more than $465,000 tax debt, it isn't clear whether the money would be considered a gift, or income.

If the money qualified as a gift, the President would not have to pay any tax on it, IRS said.

But, if it were classified as income, the President would have to pay income taxes on it in future years.

"We've never ruled on this, since the matter has not come up before," an IRS spokesman said. "It would boil down to a factual situation."

Chicago multimillionaire W. Clement Stone, who already has contributed $5.8 million to Nixon presidential campaigns, said he would not hesitate to help Nixon pay his tax debt. The White House turned down the Stone offer Thursday.

Thomas said in a statement that many callers expressed resentment "that it is apparent that what was good enough for Hubert Humphrey and Lyndon Johnson is too good for the President."

"While they were allowed huge deductions for contributing their papers to the government, President Nixon is not," Thomas said.

The White House said Wednesday, in announcing Nixon's decision to pay the additional taxes and interest for the years 1969-1972, that any errors in his tax returns "were made by those to whom he delegated the responsibility for preparing his returns and were made without his knowledge and without his approval."

Despite this disclaimer, the IRS holds a taxpayer responsible for knowing what is on his returns.

"If a taxpayer looks over his return and signs it and sends it in, presumably he knows what's on the return," the IRS spokesman said.

The IRS said its audit for the President's 1969-1972 returns is complete, and it did not feel any civil penalties were warranted.

Nixon had asked the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation to look at his returns after questions were raised. He said he would stand by the committee's decision. The committee staff subsequently said it felt Nixon owed $476,431 in back taxes and interest. The IRS, a few hours later, said it felt Nixon owed some $465,000. Nixon agreed to pay the IRS figure, and the committee said its inquiry was over.

Chapin convicted on 2 lying counts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dwight Chapin, once President Nixon's appointments secretary, was convicted Friday on two counts of lying to a grand jury investigating political sabotage in the 1972 presidential campaign.

Sentencing of the 33-year-old Chapin, now an airline vice president on leave, was set by U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell for May 15. Chapin will remain free without bond.

"I'm going to continue to fight for my innocence," Chapin told reporters afterward. "On the day I was indicted I went out on my front lawn and said I was innocent. I intend to fight this thing all the way through."

He also said "obviously I am very disappointed. The judge threw out one count of the indictment, the jury threw out one count and on a portion of another I was found not guilty."

He said he and his wife will return to their home in Winnetka, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, by Monday when he must report to a probation officer.

Immediately after the verdict, delivered by a jury that deliberated nearly 11½ hours, Chapin walked over to his weeping wife and kissed her.

He was the eighth former White House aide convicted either by guilty plea or trial.

The jury of seven men and five women found Chapin innocent of one count. A fourth count was dismissed by Gesell during the five-day trial.

Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Chapin was invited by the judge to submit "all the information about yourself" before sentencing.

The jury was asked by the judge how it voted on the first count in which Chapin was charged with making two false statements to the grand jury last April 11.

Foreman Charles L. Wesley, a retired postal worker, said the jury convicted Chapin of lying when he said he never discussed distribution of campaign literature with Donald H. Segretti, an acknowledged political saboteur hired by Chapin.

But the jury found that Chapin had not lied on the second part of the count where he was charged with falsely denying that he knew Segretti had distributed statements.

Despite the split on the question Chapin stands convicted on that count.

The jury also determined that Chapin lied when he said that he had never given Segretti "any directions or instructions with respect to any single or particular candidate."

It found him innocent of a charge that he lied when he told Segretti to talk to the FBI at a time when it appeared Segretti would be questioned by agents.

Chapin appeared calm and relaxed during the two days that it took the jury to reach its verdict.

U.S. backing of assassination unravels

By PAT GROJEAN

With chilling suspense and drama, Robert Vaughan, formerly of Sikeston, in his new book, "The Valkyrie Mandate", vividly unravels the intriguing web of circumstances surrounding and leading up to the assassination in 1963 of South Vietnam's President Ngo Dinh Diem and American involvement in the plot.

Vaughan, 38, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Vaughan, 410 Shady Lane, and currently is best known for another of his approximately 24 books — "Brandywine's War", a candid and unflattering portrait of the American military in Vietnam which has been reprinted in 74 countries and will soon become a major motion picture.

"The Valkyrie Mandate" was recently published by Simon and Schuster of New York.

In the last few years, information on American actions and involvement during the Vietnam War in places and events previously unknown to the general public have come to the public's attention. Vaughan's new book, although a novel, tells of such an incident -- American backing of the plot to overthrow the South Vietnamese government in 1963.

According to Joseph P. Shea in a copywrited story in the Feb. 22 edition of the Paradise Valley (Ariz.) American, Vaughan says the book is based on secret State Department and Defense Department papers which were among those burned during the Watergate hearings by Federal Bureau of Investigation Chief L. Patrick Gray during the Watergate hearings.

The papers, Vaughan says in the article, reveal official United States complicity in the death of President Diem. According to the book, President Diem, a Catholic ruler of Buddhist Vietnam, was assassinated as part of a military coup encouraged and planned in part by advisors from the United States with official authority. Vaughan says the transcripts bear this out.

According to the article, the papers — in photocopied transcripts — were given to Vaughan by a congressional aide to an unidentified Southern congressman before the Watergate affair became known.

In the Shea article, Vaughan says he is not absolutely sure the documents are valid, or that they are part of the same material burned by Gray. But, he says, after extensive research in Vietnam, where he was a helicopter maintenance instructor for three years, the material seems "to have the same rhythm" as other papers about the same period.

Set in Saigon during a period when tensions and tempers were near boiling or exploding, the story unfolds of the "Valkyrie Mandate," which committed America to the coup, and of the lives of people of different nationalities that it completely altered.

Extensive research by the author makes itself very clear throughout the book, as facts about that period of time in Saigon, the number of Americans there, some of the events and descriptions of Saigon are entwined with the plot of the story.

For example, encyclopedias recount the assassination of Diem in that year as a result of a military coup, although, of course, mention nothing about American involvement.

Robert Vaughan

Near the beginning of the book, Vaughan tells of the suicide by burning of five Buddhist monks near the presidential palace. History also relates this incident which rather foretells of other deaths that follow later in the book.

The reader becomes totally involved in the book from the very beginning, as he is introduced to Saigon, its make- up, smells, people, sounds and customs. Vaughan's words give the reader the feeling that he is awakening in the city and later that he is an eye witness to the rest of the action. As Vaughan describes scenes or events, the reader can almost visualize it taking place.

Each character, from President Diem and his brother Hgo Dinh Nhu and the American advisors most involved in the plot, such as Justin Barclay and Gen. Andrew MacKenzie, to the dashing French whoremaster and his most prized and useful --- employe, Princess Tamara, is carefully developed through actions and words by the characters themselves and other characters, and in part by the third person point- of- view in which the story is written.

True and gentle, but rather forbidden, love is woven with events at the whoremaster's house, political violence and desire and striving for power and survival in Vaughan's book. Through Vaughan's combination, the reader moves easily through the book.

Valkyrie --- taken from Norse mythology -- is defined as any of Odin's maidens who hover over battlefields — choosing warriors to be victorious and who conduct the souls of the slain to Valhalla. It would have been extremely difficult to choose a title which would have related better to the tale told by Vaughan.

There is much more to the suspenseful plot and characters that cannot be revealed without ruining the book for those who want to read it. Upon completing the book, the reader is left with a still, yet rather restless, feeling that is extremely difficult to explain.

The book is made more interesting by the fact that Vaughan is from Southeast Missouri, although he now lives in Phoenix, Ariz., preparing his new novel "Glory Dust", which will describe the founding of an American oil empire.

Vaughan, a 1955 graduate of Sikeston High School, attended many colleges and universities while serving in the Army. He was discharged from active duty after publication of "Brandywine's War", which was unflattering to the military.

During his 17 years as an Army helicopter pilot, he earned the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Bronze Star.

8 tapes stolen and tape player damaged

Lyman Dame, 21, of 116 N. Kingshighway reported to city police Friday that eight tapes were stolen from his car between 9 p.m. Thursday and 11 a.m. Friday, and the tape player was damaged beyond repair.

Dame said his car was parked in front of the Bible Book Store, 112 N. Kingshighway, where it was broken into and the tapes, valued at $48, were taken. The tape player was valued at $60.

Leon Travis, 846 E. Kathleen St., was released on $35 bond following his arrest Friday afternoon on a peace disturbance charge.

Police said they were called to the Travis home by his wife, Mrs. Louise Travis, who said he forced his way into their home and started trouble.

Travis will be arraigned in City Court Thursday.

NATIONAL BOYS' CLUB WEEK

In 1860, the forerunner of the modern Boys' Clubs of America began its work with the youth of pre-Civil War America. The success of this outstanding organization is attested to by the fact that today a staff of more than 6,000 professional youth counselors working in 1,000 Boys' Clubs located in communities across the United States now provide companionable leadership, vocational guidance and special counseling for over one million boys.

This year, during the period from April 7th-13th, the nation will observe National Boys' Club Week. The great strength of the Boys' Clubs has always been that they have worked within the community at the local level to meet local problems that they know better than anyone else. There are many examples. One of them is to be found in Dayton, Ohio. There, as in many communities, homeowners complained about the scarcity of workers to do odd jobs, ranging from yard work, car washing and window cleaning to painting -- the time- consuming chores that plague every homeowner. At the same time, many young people, including members of the Dayton Boys' Club, were unable to find part-time and summer jobs. To give boys the chance to do useful work that would prepare them for occupations in later life and to meet a community need, the Boys' Club set up a Job Bank program designed to bring potential employers and boys in need of jobs together. A staff member of the Club coordinated the effort. The Job Bank now offers jobs year round with heavy concentration on summer employment, and hundreds of boys have had the experience of a successful working relationship. They have gained a first step up the ladder of success in the working world.

A Boys' Club is a community asset of great value. It deserves year- round support. Boys' Club Week is an appropriate time to broaden awareness of this fact across the nation.

HELP THE VIETNAM VET

Early last year, to the enormous relief of their families and countrymen, about 600 servicemen who had been held as prisoners of war in Southeast Asia returned home. Their return was appropriately greeted by fanfare and intense publicity.

America has no difficulty getting "up" for the dramatic homecoming of our POWs. But what about the other seven million veterans of the Vietnam era, including more than three million who served in the Southeast Asián theater? What have we done for them lately?

Vietnam veterans have faced and continue to face unique difficulties as they attempt to enter the mainstream of American society. They fought in the longest, most expensive, and least understood war in U. S. history.

The Vietnam vet, in a sense, is a victim of the modern age of communications technology. That technology brought the ugly realities of war into the homes of millions of Americans night after night in living color for years on end. Today that vet is a continuing reminder of war most citizens would rather forget.

But the question must be faced: Because the war in Southeast Asia has been less well understood than, say, World War II, is the Vietnam vet's service and sacrifice any less honorable than GI Joe's?

Congress is now considering veterans legislation that would be an important step toward showing this nation's gratitude to the men who heeded the call to serve. One bill (S.2784), which would accelerate educational benefits for Vietnam Era Veterans, was taken up in heaings by the Senate Veterans Affairs Sub-Committee on March 29.

But there is much more we can do. Vietnam vets — including the more than 340,000 disabled — who require assistance to regain their emotional or physical health should receive the very best that this country can offer. Both the public and private sectors of our economy should put the vet at the top of their hiring lists as jobs become available.

And each of us should repent of his neglect today and seek out a veteran and thank him.

As the U. S. moves closer to adoption of a metric system of measurement, the National Association of Manufacturers comments: "Each sector of the American economy should select the most efficient cost, benefit approach in changing over to the metric system in cooperation with the National Metric Conversion Board. While there have been astronomical estimates on the conversion costs, no one really knows just how much it will be. However, there will be little incentive to look for thoughtful low-cost solutions if subsidies are made available by the federal government. We should rely on the ingenuity of the American people to find ways of circumventing the costs of conversion, and target dates for conversion should not include the time taken to devise the best possible program."

JUST FROM ONE AD

There are very few customers in a market for only one item on any one day. In one study only 44 women in 10,000 purchased the average package goods brand when no ad for it appeared in their newspaper. When a newspaper ad for the same brand did appear in their newspaper 50 in 10,000 went out and bought it. This is an actual sales increase, from one ad, of 14%.

What's more, after one newspaper ad, for just one nationally advertised brand in a product category, sales for the entire product category will take a 15% jump.

We know that newspapers give you coverage of nearly all of those readers ready to buy. After exposure to just one little newspaper ad, an additional 4% said they'd pick the test brand the next time that they buy.

As you can see there is really nothing to it. All it takes is a little ink on paper ... newspaper.

RULE OF LAW

A statement by the president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the largest farm organization in the nation, on the progress of farm labor relations legislation shows how inexorably the rule of law under representative government moves forward.

The official pointed out that enactment of a new farm labor law will be given top priority by the Farm Bureau in the 93rd Congress. He also observed, "Our Farm Bureau policy clearly states that we uphold the right of employees to bargain collectively, but condemn the use by either labor or management of force, coercion, intimidation, secondary boycotts, or any other unfair means applied by one side to force its will upon the other. What's wrong with having a special farm labor board similar to the National Labor Relations Board, to consider the special problems of agriculture? What is wrong with secret ballot elections for farm workers, or prohibiting boycotts in agriculture as they are presently prohibited in industry?" The pressure for farm labor legislation has arisen as a result of excesses in the organizing of farm workers, excesses that have deprived consumers of the right of free choice in the marketplace and have threatened to subject farmers -- and consumers -- to a type of dictatorial economic control in the name of collective bargaining that free citizens cannot accept.

Three states now have laws banning the use of the secondary boycott and providing for secret ballot election for farm workers, and the drive is continuing for similar legislation in other states as part of the campaign to restore the freedom to market for the producers and sellers of farm commodities. Thus the wheels of the democratic process and law continue to turn -- slowly but surely.

THE ADMIRATION SOCIETY

Down in Jefferson City there is an admiration society. It is composed of at least three members — and possibly a few more. Main members of this admiration group are Governor Christopher Bond, Attorney General John C. Danforth and Lieutenant Governor William Phelps.

Here is the way the society operates:

General Danforth thinks Governor Bond is fine material for the presidency; Governor Bond thinks General Danforth would make a candidate for the GOP nomination for United States Senator; and that leaves Governor Phelps, who is a bit on the outside, mainly because he is the lowest on the totem pole when it comes to politics.

So there you have it. Then aside from these men, there are some appointees of Governor Bond who think Governor Bond is a remarkable man; they think General Danforth is a great attorney general and undoubtedly they think Bill Phelps is an exceptional lieutenant governor.

Governor Bond, who attended the recent GOP Lincoln day affair in Kansas City, was asked by a reporter at Kansas City about defending President Richard M. Nixon. Governor Bond said Missouri voters are too smart to think the Watergate scandal is "a product or reflection of the Republican party, either nationally or in Missouri."

When he was asked later if he would defend President Nixon's actions in connection with Watergate, Missouri's wealthy governor replied, "I don't have the full facts to conduct a defense."

One can only wonder just what Governor Bond has been doing for the past several months. Do you suppose it is possible that Governor Bond has not yet made up his mind about Spiro Agnew?

It has not been too many months ago when both Governor Bond and Attorney General John C. Danforth were both defending President Nixon. They seem to have quit that now. It is possible that the reason they "pulled in their horns" was the fact that Mr. Nixon's popularity for some reason or other fellow to an all-time low of 26 per cent.

Remember the old slogan, "politics makes strange bedfellows." Doesn't it?

GROWING TRADE DICTATES CHANGE

There is good reason to believe that cookbooks of the future will discuss heating a liter of water to 100 degrees centigrade, footballs will be kicked from the 20 meter line, and speedometers will measure kilometers instead of miles.

Congress is considering the establishment of a ten- year timetable for conversion to the metric (SI) system of measurement. A National Metric Conversion Board would be empowered to set up an official plan for making the change. Probably this will happen soon because it makes good sense to measure in units of ten.

We are used to feet, quarts, and pounds, but the rest of the world is not. With international trade growing by metric-measure leaps and bounds, the U. S. is beginning to suffer because our products don't fit metric tools and our tools don't fit foreign products. Congress ought to set up procedures for making the change, allowing maximum flexibility. While metric should be the "official" system of measurement, there is no reason why it needs to be the "only" system for people who prefer the old ways. A Metric Board, large enough to represent all of the interests affected, should report to the President, not a single government department. Also the Metric Board, not Congress, will be best qualified to set a fixed date for the official conversion because probems might develop which cannot now be foreseen.

It will be an expensive, but necessary change. Fortunately, there is not much support for government subsidizing the changeover. Each sector of the economy should have the incentive of finding the most efficient means of making the change and this is less likely to happen if there is "free" subsidy money available from the government.

THE LONG, WRONG ROAD TO PEACE

When Pyrrhus was about to sail for Italy, Cineas, a wise and good man, asked him what were his intentions and expectations.

"To conquer Rome," said Pyrrhus.

"And what will you do next, my Lord?"

"Next I will conquer Italy."

"And after that?"

"We will subdue Carthage, Macedonia, all Afrida and all Greece"

"And when we have conquered all we can, what shall we do?"

"Do? Why, then we will sit down and spend our time in peace and comfort."

"Ah, my lord," said the wise Cineas, "what prevents our being in peace and comfort now?"

Up Red Banners: Saxbe's Warning of World Terrorist Conspiracy Is Based On Black Liberation Manual

WASHINGTON -- When first I visited an Argentine labor headquarters, not too long ago, I was asked to wait for the president. He'd be in shortly. I took a chair by the window. In he came. First thing the Buenos Aires union chief did was to grab my arm. Then he pushed me into a chair with its back to the wall. No sense, said he, making yourself a target.

Those were the days when the revolutionaries contented themselves with an occasional rifle shot. Or with threatening to burn down the huge paint shop of a Cordoba auto plant. When I got there the "grievance" was settled.

Since then, as Atty. Gen. William Saxbe has just warned, the revoltuion has become an international conspiracy.

At least 120 political kidnappings have occured since Jan. 1, 1973 , in the Argentine alone. Almost $30 million has been paid in ransom. Many others have been "executed" by hit-and-run people's revolutionary armies' gun squads. Killed on the streets have been an executive of a zipper plant and, on March 22, the retired head of the construction workers union.

There is no genesis. These "armies" just spring up. They splinter, silver, fraction and use automatic weapons where once the ideologists used texts and dialectics.

Bill Saxbe, whatever else he says, undoubtedly referred to a special volume when he spoke of American neo-revolutionists "taking this right out of some Maoist doctrinal textbooks on how to operate in terrorism and other forms of civil disturbance." And the text of which he spoke is the grim work of a "field marshal" of Eldridge Cleaver's Harlem-based "Black Liberation Army."

This volume was written by Don Cox, a brutal "henchman" of the intellectualized, articulate Cleaver who doesn't bother with blood on the streets. Cox is a fugitive from two murder warrants-- one in Maryland and other issued in San Francisco. He is an admitted killer. He boasts of being part of an execution squad which barged into a San Francisco police station some years ago, shooting all the time.

He relishes the moment when he and his companions fired five or six shots into an officer who died later.

This volume is "On Organizing Urban Guerrilla Units." Originally it was published in Algeria. Later it was republished in Harlem--'Babylon" to Cleaver now in self- exile somewhere in Europe. He split from the Bobby Seale Black Panther faction. And he glories in the new revolution. So does Field Marshal Don Cox, whereabouts unknown. It all got pretty bloody for the police (black and white) in several cities for a while, should anyone care to ask.

This manual was issued in 1970. It was first exposed by the House Committee on Internal Security. Few heeded. Few generally do.

There have been other manuals written by urban guerrillas for apprentice revolutionists. Few public leaders took them seriously. Few generally do. Perhaps now that Atty. Gen. Saxbe, using FBI information, has warned of new kidnappings, especially of government officials, the citizenry soon will believe this isn't the children's hour.

It's raw terrorism. Some of it's garden variety criminalism, no doubt. But it's overwhelmingly a new revolutionism, self-financed.

It trains frogmen in Australia, bushmen in Ethiopia, hijackers in Middle East hills, and dynamiters in London. There have been international. "congresses" of terrorism's theoreticians. There is a constant flow of confidential material for regional and national "congresses" to study.

It takes sophistication and an intimate knowledge of revolutionists from Lenin to Cleaver and incumbent "field marshals." That knowledge is in at least one central office -- the headquarters of the 40 - man House Internal Security Committee staff.

Its warnings and those of its chairman, Rep. Richard Ichord, have been scoffed at in the past. Now there are forces in the Congress which are attempting to wipe out the committee, throw its vast files into some attic, disperse its "knowledgeables." Why? Why should Missouri's Congressman Richard Bolling (Kansas City), who is chairman of the Select Committee on Committees of the House, move to put the internal security work under the House Committee on Government Operations? The latter group just couldn't handle the operation. It is overworked. Its staff is tiny and split over a series of subcommittees.

If Congressman Bolling doesn't believe this neo-revolutionism is a bloody game, let him look at the Argentine box score. It's all there in big red letters.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Bringing Congress to Them

WASHINGTON-- Foreign governments in quest of U. S. benefits now use reverse lobbying. Instead of calling upon Congress, they bring the congressmen to them.

Just last January, for example, Sen. Vance Hartke, D- Ind., accompanied by his wife, his daughter and two aides, breezed through five countries in about three weeks. In each of the countries he visited, at least part of Hartke's expenses were picked up by the host government.

State Department cables reveal that in Iran, for instance, the government "informed (Hartke) that he will be the guest of (Iran) and that they will arrange program including hotel reservations and transportation."

The Pakistani government, according to the cables, provided Hartke with "hotel reservations, car and driver and transportation for Karachi to Islamabad and return."

In Ceylon, "Senator and Mrs. Hartke and daughter will be guests of (the government) with hotel, travel expenses paid." In Indonesia, the senator was a "guest of Parliament." And in New Zealand, he was also a government guest.

For spending money, according to the cables, the various U. S. embassies provided Hartke with an additional $75 a day in local currencies.

Not only members of Congress but their staff assistants have been gallivanting around the globe at the expense of foreign governments. On April 13, for instance, a dozen congressional aides will arrive in Taiwan for a vacation financed by Nationalist China.

The State Department cabled the U. S. embassy in Taipei requesting PX cards for the junketing aides "if embassy in position to issue them." The embassy replied that the aides would need "official passports" or "we will be in the rather uncomfortable position of being unable to obtain PX cards for some."

The senior staff member, Ralph Vandervort of the Senate Space Committee, told us the trip was "kind of a public relations thing" on the part of the Chiang Kai- shek government.

The few thousand dollars old Chiang spends to woo U. S. officials, judging by past performance, is money well spent. In the past four years, he has collected $373.7 million in U. S. military aid.

The South Vietnamese government has done far better, having wrangled over $1 billion in arms aid in 1973. Now the Nixon Administration has requested another $474 million in "emergency funds" for the Saigon regime.

Even as the request is pending before Congress, State Department cables reveal that the Saigon government has invited eight key congressional staff members to visit South Vietnam to view "present realities."

FOOTNOTE: Congressmen and their aides who accept free trips abroad from foreign governments may be in violation of the Constitution, which forbids U. S. officials from accepting any "emolument...of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince or foreign state."

BACKROOM POLITICS: President Nixon's wily Watergate attorney, James St. Clair, has thrown the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry into a tizzy by demanding the right to cross- examine and even subpoena witnesses.

The impeachment investigation, like a grand jury probe, is merely supposed to determine whether charges should be brought against the President. It would take a two-thirds vote of the Senate to convict him.

Defense attorneys normally don't participate in grand jury proceedings. But committee Republicans desperately want St. Clair to be involved in the impeachment investigation. With the President's counsel present, they would be relieved of the burden of defending Nixon.

Indeed, the Republicans feel so strongly that they voted 12 to 0 behind closed doors to reject the advice of their own top lawyer, Albert Jenner, who had argued against St. Clair's participation.

Committee Democrats, however, fear that St. Clair's celebrated courtroom skills could interfere with the impeachment inquiry. Chairman Peter Rodino, D- N.J., has emphasized that the probe "is not an adversary proceeding."

In an earlier column, we reported that Jenner is being undercut by the committee's No. 2 Republican lawyer, Sam Garrison, who is working behind the scenes to obstruct the impeachment investigation.

Many observers believed Jenner, a distinguished Chicago attorney, was hired to take the Watergate onus off the Republicans. His experience and integrity, it was thought, would serve as the excuse for Republicans to move away from the President.

Instead, our sources say the senior Republican, Rep. Edward Hutchinson, R- Mich., has bypassed Jenner and given real authority over the GOP staff to Garrison.

Both Jenner and chief counsel John Doar have tried to maintain lines of communication between the Democratic and Republican staffs. But Garrison has blocked the goal of an integrated staff. He has refused to work on any of the fact-finding task forces but confines himself instead to strictly partisan efforts. He is now hard at work drafting a partisan brief on the St. Clair issue.

Material to move into new building

CHARLESTON — Brown Shoe Co. plans to move some materials into its new supply department building next week, according to Allen Guetersloh, superintendent of Factory K operations here.

Several supervisors from the St. Louis area will move to the area to supervise operations in the new 88,500-square-foot addition now nearing completion south of the Brown Shoe plant on East Marshall Street.

Guetersloh said the new operation should mean an addition of about 70 jobs to the company's payroll in Charleston. These people will be hired locally as the need for them develops, Guetersloh said. They will not be hired at one time, he added.

The supply operation will be an integral part of the local Factory K operation, Guetersloh explained.

The main part of the new steel building measures 200 by 400 feet, with a smaller portion measuring 110 by 85 feet. It will have covered loading facilities for eight trucks on the west side.

Interior of the building is entirely open space, with the exception of a relatively small office area on the northwest corner. The offices will be air conditioned, but the main portion of the building will not, Guetersloh

General contractor for the construction job is Mississippi Valley Structural Steel Co. of St. Louis. The construction contractor is Midwest Mueller Co. of St. Louis.

Cancer control month proclaimed in Sikeston

Mayor Frank Ferrell has proclaimed April Cancer Control Month in Sikeston to emphasize the need for control of the disease.

Clem Beal, chairman of the Scott County unit of the American Cancer Society, has announced a style show at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Security Federal Savings and Loan Association community room to call attention to the special month. Proceeds will go to the American Cancer Society.

Another event scheduled to raise funds for the cancer society will be a banquet May 4 at which world shot put recordholder George Woods, a Sikeston High School product, will be the special guest.

The Mayor's proclamation states that "this is the time in which all of us should give profound thought to the gravity of cancer's peril on the one hand and the hope of controlling the disease on the other."

One of four persons in Sikeston will eventually have cancer, the proclamation states, and only one of three cancer victims is now being saved.

By early detection and prompt, competent, medical treatment of the disease, the number of cures can be increased to one out of two, the proclamation states.

"The American Cancer Society is summoning all of us to participate in this life-saving work by informing everyone of cancer's warning signals and to cooperate in their program of research, education and service to cancer patients," the proclamation adds.

Ann Landers

Snoring problem eased by exercise

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago, I was on the verge of a nervous breakdown because I couldn't get a night's sleep. My husband's snoring was getting louder and louder. I couldn't understand how he could sleep through that horrendous racket.

One day a friend suggested something she had learned in yoga class. It solved the problem for her. It is called alternate -nostril breathing, and it works!

Now when I say, "Honey please do the breathing exercise," he closes one nostril with his thumb and breathes four times. Then he closes the other nostril and breathees four times After five rounds, he is sound asleep --and so am I. --Forty Winks

Dear Winks: Here's your letter and I'd be interested in hearing from readers who have tried it.

Dear Ann Landers: Four years ago, I married a fine man for companionship. It seemed like a sensible arrangement for two people in our mid -60s. His wife had passed on within weeks of my husband.

I had a modest amount of money and my second husband and I have made some good investments. I never had children of my own, but I have two nieces and a nephew I love dearly. My husband has one daughter who has resented me from the day I married her father. She has a well -to -do husband and two fine youngsters. I can't understand why she hates me so.

Last week her father had a bad cold, nothing really serious. She took me aside and said, "If anything happens to father I want you to know that I am his sole heir."

I was so hurt by her remark I did not reply. I hesitate to say anything to my husband for fear he will think I am critical of her. Furthermore, I would not want to start trouble in the family. Please advise me. I am --Very Upset

Dear V.U.: Say nothing to your husband about his daughter's crude remark. But, if you haven't seen a lawyer about the rightful distribution of his estate (and yours), by all means do so the first thing tomorrow morning.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm becoming serious about a man who is a junior partner in one of the city's most distinguished law firms. Greg wants me to go with him to select a ring. I have another year of college ahead of me and don't feel I'm ready to make the commitment. I must confess Greg turns me on and is terrific company. We see each other only weekends because I'm a serious student, carrying a double major. Greg keeps saying he's dying of loneliness.

A friend of my brother works in the same law firm and tells quite another story. It seems Greg rarely gets to the office before noon, his eyes looking like two tomatoes. He apparently is chasing around five nights a week with an assortment of dollies.

When I asked him about it he said, "Yes, I do go out, but only with sex -starved clients (mostly widows) who run after me. It's strictly business."

I'd hate to be made a fool of. What is your opinion? --Linda

Dear Linda: A healthy young man should be able to run faster that any sex -starved widow. Tell him you'll consider marriage after you've finished your education and he has finished his fooling around.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen Age Sex --Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50c in coin and a long, self -addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Bobcats club SCCHS

MORLEY — The Delta Bobcats baseballers literally bombed the Scott County Central Braves here Friday afternoon to the tune of 17-0.

The Braves defense offered little defense and the pitching of loser McGhee allowed a total of 12 base hits in the six innings played.

The Bobcats paraded around the basepaths in the top of the first inning scoring four times before the rally could be put down. The second inning was nearly the same as Delta crossed the plate two more times to take a comfortable 2-0 lead.

Scott Central had their hands full trying to slug the fastball of David Duncan and collected only four safties in the game.

Delta was unable to score again until the tip of the sixth inning when the Bobcats put their offense to work once again and scored 11 times to end the game.

Rightfielder Keith Cook blasted four hits in the game including a triple. Mike Kelly, Carson Kelly, and Crader also slammed triples in the game.

AMATIS LOANED TO TOKYO QUARTET

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Corcoran Gallery, which 11 years ago was bequeathed four Amati instruments by Mrs. William Andrews Clark, widow of the Montana senator, has loaned the instruments to the Tokyo String Quartet.

Dogs blank KHS

An impressive pitching performance by junior righthander Kenny Stokes and a less- than - impressive performance by Kelly fielders spelled win for the Sikeston Bulldogs Friday afternoon. The pitcher's duel was won by Sikeston 2-0, as Stokes allowed just two hits and fanned eight in his five innings of hurling. His mound opponent, Jeff Jackson, lasted just two innings before his strong right arm tightened up. For the rest of the game Kelly got scoreless relief work from Kenny Urhahn, but Sikeston had counted twice off Jackson and threatened to score just once.

Sikeston scored one run each in the first two frames and for all intents and purposes the game was over. However, the very good-sized crowd that braved 40 degree temperatures was treated to a very well played game. Defense was sparkling throughout the contest, admittedly more so when the gray-clad Bulldogs were in the field.

The first defensive gem came in the first inning. With one out, Urhahn bounced a hard bunt into a good place and beat a hurried throw from thirdbaseman Bruce Lawrence. However, the next batter hit a sharp grounder to Lawrence at third. He gave a strong, good throw to Bill Schatzley at second and the Sikeston second sacker's relay peg to first had the Hawk runner by plenty to give Sikeston its third around - the - horn double play in three games.

In their half of the first Sikeston scored for the first time, and the action again began with one out. This time it was the Sikeston shortstop, Rick Eisenbach, who ripped a hanging curve from Jackson up the middle for a base hit. After John Leible walked, Stokes hit a hard grounder to the firstbaseman Bob Jackson. Jackson made a bad throw to second and Eisenbach crossed the plate.

After the first inning, Kelly never threatened Stokes again. But, the Bulldogs came up with another, eventually unneeded run, in the bottom of the second.

This time with one out, Donny Taylor reached base when catcher Ronny Schlosser dropped the ball as Taylor fanned on a bad pitch. Walker sacrificed him to second and the Sikeston centerfielder crossed the plate as Jackson left the base too soon on a throw from short.

The crowd shivered in silence for most of the rest of the game, until Stokes was removed in the fifth. Reliever Richard Blankenship, obviously bothered by the cold and not completely warmed up, ran into control problem in the sixth, but was bailed out by sparkling defensive plays by Leible and Eisenbach. Then Blankenship retired the side in the seventh to save the win for Stokes.

It was the first outing of the year for the hard- firing Stokes and, of course, was his first win. Sikeston's record is 3-0. Kelly now stands at 2-2.

Mitch Walker had the only extra- base hit of the game -- a double when the rightfielder misjudged his fly in the fourth.

Sikeston next game will be next Monday at Hayti.

Wyatt qualifies for flood insurance

WYATT — The Department of Housing and Urban Development has qualified the city of Wyatt for subsidized flood insurance, effective April 2, according to 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison.

Burlison explained that all structures used for residential, business, religious or agricultural purposes, structures occupied by nonprofit organizations, and structures owned by state or local government or their agencies, are eligible for flood insurance coverage.

The Cape Girardeau Democrat noted that Wyatt became qualified under this program when it agreed to adopt land use and control measures that will minimize flood damage to future construction. Local insurance agents may obtain policies and other information from the National Flood Insurers Association servicing office, which is the MFA Insurance Companies, 1817 West Broadway, Columbia, Missouri 65201.

The case of the birdbrained secretary

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Curvaceous Clara moved from lap to lap until she was secretary to the president of a big corporation. When she got there, her primary job, businesswise, was to sort out her boss' mail and to examine the contents thereof. One letter that she filed in the wastebasket, however, contained additional terms to an important contract that had been entered into between the corporation and a certain Mr. Blum. And, when the corporation failed to perform those additional terms, Blum began to fume and sued the corporation for damages resulting from its nonperformance.

"We can't be held responsible," insisted the president of the corporation in court. "The only one who ever saw those additional terms was my secretary and, like most secretaries, she's got all she can do to find her way to work each morning."

"Because his secretary may have been a birdbrain," retorted Mr. Blum, "is no defense to my lawsuit. Since she received the letter, the corporation was bound by its contents."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the corporation liable because of its birdbrained secretary?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that a corporation cannot disclaim knowledge of the contents of a letter which is addressed to the corporation, and to the attention of the president, even if it is viewed only by the president's secretary where the president does not choose to read his mail but delegates that duty to his secretary.

LOSE 10-20-30 POUNDS!
Easy To Lose Lbs. Fast With New Vitamin 'E' Diet

HOLLYWOOD (Special)- New scientific discoveries have produced a Vitamin E diet that quickly works wonders on overweight people, and reportedly is gaining great popularity across the country with glowing reports of easy weight loss "while still eating almost as much as you want."

Those who follow the simple Vitamin E diet report an average loss of at least a pound a day and even more without exercise or starvation. Nutritionists' files are bulging with happy testimonials from formerly overweight people who are now trim and slim again. Best of all, you can still eat almost as much as you want of the "forbidden foods" like steak, chicken, fish sauces, gravies, bacon & eggs and still lose weight.

Chewable (candy-like) vitamin E tablets, as used in the diet plan, contain a new scientific combination of ingredients that quickly curbs and controls the appetite, while also giving the wonderous benefits of Vitamin E which is so essential to good health.

The use of the new Vitamin E Diet tablets and foods prescribed in the plan will, through natural action, act to help your body use up excess fat. According to recent clinical test, a person who is deficient in Vitamin E or Protein "will double the speed of fat utilization" with the use of Vitamin E.

Nearly 60,000 acres surveyed in county

Soil Scientist

It has been eight months since a soil survey began in Scott County. Nearly 60,000 acres of the county has been mapped by the survey during this time. Since last Aug. 1, soil scientists have been walking over the northern and southern parts of the county, boring holes, examining soil horizons, describing soil profiles, measuring thickness of topsoil and steepness of slopes and plotting this information on aerial photographs.

Working on the survey are Mark Taake, Bill Knight and Burton Brown.

Twenty different soils have been identified and described so far. It is estimated that more than 40 soils will be identified before the survey is completed.

Soil surveys are used as a basic tool in planning the wise use of land. For many years soil surveys have been used in resource conservation farm planning. Presently, 252 farms in Scott County have conservation plans. Soil surveys are also playing an important part in urban planning, the development of zoning ordinances, evaluating rural real estate and establishing guidance for engineering uses of soils, recreation, wildlife and woodland.

Soil surveys also have been used to evaluate soils as sites for ponds, lakes, sanitary landfills, septic tank filter fields, sewage lagoons, buildings, roads, streets and to determine erosion and sediment potential, runoff and many other uses. Many land use changes are taking palce in Scott County. These should be planned with consideration of the suitability of the soil, its limitations and hazards.

The soil survey was started as a cooperative agreement between the Scott County Soil and Water Conservation District and the U. S. Soil Conservation Service on Aug. 1, 1973.

The County Court, some cities and various individuals supported the survey by providing funds to hire a district soil scientist. The cities that financially supported the soil survey have been given priority in mapping.

Since the survey started, major emphasis has been placed on training members of the survey party, identifying and describing the soils and gathering pertinent information about each soil. During the coming year the major emphasis will be on mapping acres.

There is a continual need, however, to study and record information and describe the soils.

The black area, shown on this map of Scott County, indicates the location where soil surveys have been completed. Surveys have been completed on 60,000 acres.

More herbicides may be used by soybean growers

By JOE H. SCOTT
State Extension Agronomist

Cotton planting time in the Bootheel is only a few days away. Land preparation has been interupted by frequent showers. However, we are farther ahead than we were this time last year.

Still getting reports that growers can't get preplant soil incorporated herbicides for their cotton crop. We will have more cotton with a single treatment of a pre- emergence surface applied herbicides such as diuron (Karmex or Dynex) and fluometuron (Cotoran or Lanex) than in the past. Good weed control can be obtained with these treatments.

Growers will need to watch their fields more closely. If weeds emerge before a rain is received to activate the pre-emergence herbicides other control practices will have to be used. Kill the weeds with a rotary hoe, cultivation or postemergence herbicides while they are small. Do not wait for the surface- applied herbicides to kill them, as once the weeds are up and have put down a root system, few if any of them will be killed by the pre-emergence herbicide.

Soybean growers have more pre- emergence surface applied herbicides to select from than cotton growers. But there is likely to be a short supply of these with 55 million acres of soybeans to be planted in United States. Also some of the same herbicides are used by corn growers.

Still time to kill weeds in wheat

About two- thirds of the wheat has been topdressed with nitrogen. It will be questionable if the other one-third will get topdressed. Nitrogen can be applied up until early April, but the yield will not be as good as if applied earlier.

The wheat that has been topdressed has responded to the nitrogen and warm weather and is growing rapidly. The important thing is to keep it that way for top yield and quality. Grain buyers tell us the dock penalty is expected to be pretty heavy for wheat contaminated with vetch, garlic and wild onions.

Vetch, mustard and dock can be controlled by applying one half to three fourth pound per acre of 2,4-D acid equivalent. The lower rate is for ester form of 2,4-D and the higher rate is for the amine form. The amine form is less injurious than the ester form.

Garlic and onion are harder to control. If these are present in your wheat, apply three fourth to one pound per acre of 2,4-D acid equivalent in the ester form. Low volatile esters should be used to avoid drift and penetrate down to the garlic and onions. This treatment will not kill the garlic but will prevent aerial bublet formation.

Applications can be made from tillering to the boot stage. Do not apply before plants are four inches tall or during the boot to dough stage of kernel development. Such applications will result in reduced yields.

Best results can be expected if the 2,4-D is applied after tillering on warm, sunny days when the temperature is above 60 degrees and no rain expected for 12 hours. Also, 2,4-D mixes well with liquid nitrogen and can be applied at the same time if temperature is high enough for 2,4-D to work.

The above treatments may kill clover or lespedeza underseeded in the wheat unless the wheat and weeds are large enough to afford protection from the 2,4-D. All forms of 2,4-D should be applied with extreme caution to prevent drift to sensitive crops. Cotton, tomatoes, grapes and legumes are very sensitive.

Several farmers called our offices Monday and they were concerned about the recent cold weather damage to their wheat. Well, we don't know exactly how much damage has been done, but it could vary from 0 to 20 per cent.

Some of the Delta Center researchers have observed the damaged wheat under the microscope and found little damage. It is certain the taller wheat has been damaged more than the smaller wheat. If the growing point of the wheat is above ground level it is susceptible to cold damage. Most of our whesat was past his stage so some damage has occurred.

It will be a few days before the full extent of the damage is fully known. We may not completely know until harvest. There isn't anything that can be done to overcome the damage so we will just need to wait and see how the wheat recovers.

Contact a local area agronomy specialist for further information. He will be in touch with the situation and can keep you informed.

Farmland turns to Canada for natural gas

KANSAS CITY (AP)— A big farm cooperative has turned to Canada for the natural gas it needs to produce nitrogen fertilizer, and plans to spend $400 million to manufacture it there and pipe it into the United States.

Farland Industries Inc. said Friday it hopes to have two plants operating near Calgary, Alta., late in 1976 and two more by 1978 or 1979.

Farmland is the big Kansas City- based manufacturing and wholesaling cooperative which serves local farm co- ops in 15 states between Minnesota and Texas and Illinois and Colorado.

Ernest T. Lindsey, Farmland's president, said it turned to Canada because it was able to get a 30- year commitment for 200 million cubic feet of natural gas a day.

At Enid, Okla., it is just getting into production with one of the last two nitrogen fertilizer plants which will probably be built in the United States because of the depletion of the country's natural gas reserves.

"Our joint venture with Canada will free U. S. gas for such vital jobs as home heating, even as we produce more fertilizer for our farmers," Lindsey said.

The scheme includes a new 1,600- mile pipeline between Lethbridge in Canada and a connection with Farmland's present pipeline system at Garner on the north border of Iowa.

The present system will carry the liquid anhydrous ammonia through Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma to Perryton, in the Texas panhandle. Farmland also refines gasoline, diesel fuel, lubricants and propane.

The four fertilizer plants near Calgary are expected to cost about $325 million and the pipeline improvements about $75 million.

Each of the four plants will have a capacity of 1,250tons a day, and when they all get into operation they will produce at the rate of 1.5 million tons a year.

Warren Dewlen, Farmland's vice president for fertilizer, estimates the 15 states which it serves use 35 to 40 per cent of the nitrogen fertilizer which U. S. farmers put on their crops.

With the demand for fertilizer up and the supply of natural gas dwindling, some authorities are predicting a practical shortage of up to 30 per cent this year. They also say that one- third of the nation's food production can be attributed directly to the use of fertilizer.

Mule power turns dirt

Fred V. Heinkel, between mules, president of the Missouri Farmers Association, appropriately uses a plow to turn the first dirt for a replica of the one-room Newcomer School. Sixty years ago seven Chariton county farmers met at the Newcomer School near Brunswick and pooled their order to purchase binder twine. From this beginning the MFA has grown to be a large farmer owned business and to become a farm organization with more than 152,000 members. The school house is being constructed on the grounds of the MFA Insurance companies. The grounds will be landscaped and the building will house artifacts typical of early rural school.

Cotton herbicides are examined

By THOMAS A. BROWN, JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

Cotton planting time is almost here, and many farmers are wondering which herbicide to use for chemical weed control in this crop this year. Let's take a brief look at the herbicides recommended for pre- plant and pre- emergence weed control in cotton by the University of Missouri College of Agriculture.

Preplant or Pre- emergence

Paraquat is recommended as a preplant treatment for the control of most annual grasses and will kill the foliage of perennial weeds. It should be applied after weeds come up but before planting cotton. This practice is more adapted to bedded land where there is a need to control growing weeds without working the beds.

NSMA + surfactant is also recommended as a preplant treatment for the control of annual broadleaf weeds and grasses. When planting is delayed after a seedbed is prepared, this treatment can be used to control weeds that have emerged without reworking the seedbed.

This application should be made when weeds are small, as control of weeds four inches tall or larger may not be adequate especially if the stand is thick. Cotton can be planted just before or shortly after spraying. Reliability of weed control by MSMA decreases when the temperature is below 70 degrees.

Trifluralin (Treflan) is recommended as a preplant, incorporated treatment on a wide variety of soils. It gives good control of most grasses and some small- seeded annual broadleaf weeds, including pigweed. It does not effectively control prickly sida, cocklebur, morning glory, ragweed, velvetleaf, jimsonweed and nutgrass.

Trifluralin should be incorporated into the soil as soon as possible, preferably within eight hours after application. Variable control will probably result from delayed application especially if applied to a wet, warm soil or when the wind velocity is high.

If land is to be bedded, herbicide placement can be gauged more accurately if application and incorporation are performed after beds have been formed and dragged down.

Nitralin (Planavin) is also recommended as a preplant, incorporated treatment. The information outlined for trifluralin above also applies to nitralin. This chemical should be incorporated within 48 hours after application. For best results, it should not be incorporated over 1 1/2 inches deep.

Diuron (Karmex) is recommended for a pre- emergence application on loam soils. It will give good control of most common grasses and annual broadleaf weeds for six weeks. It gives fair control of Johnson grass seedlings and prickly sida and poor control of nutgrass and velvetleaf.

Rainfall within a week to 10 days after application is necessary for good results. Diuron is not recommended for use on light sand or heavy clay soils with a high organic matter content.

Fluometuron (Cotoran or Lanex), when used as a pre- emergence application will give good control of most annual grasses and broadleaf weeds except nutgrass, velvet leaf and Johnsongrass seedlings. It can be applied to the soil surface or lightly incorporated into the soil after planting.

Prepiant Plus Pre- emergence

Some herbicides complement each other, and combinations of preplant and pre- emergence herbicides are recommended for more effective control in some cases. In fields having a severe infestation of both grasses and broadleaf weeds, such a combination may be beneficial.

In such cases, either trifluralin or nitralin, is recommended as a preplant incorporated treatment followed by a pre- emergence application of either diuron or fluometuron.

A UMC Guide, titled "1974 Recommendations for Weed Control in Cotton," which is available upon request at county University of Missouri Extension Centers, gives detailed information pertaining to chemical weed control in cotton, including recommended rates of application for each of the recommended herbicides.

Corn borers give vital information

COLUMBIA-- You might wonder about a fellow who spends his time raising the most destructive insects ever to hit the Southern Corn Belt.

But G. M. (Mike) Chippendale claims "his" southwestern corn borers are giving him the kinds of information that could seal the doom of these pests that have toppled corn stalks in 13 states from Arizona to Missouri to Alabama.

By raising about 2,000 borers a month on artificial diets, the University of Missouri- Columbia entomologist can manipulate their life cycle.

Chippendale figures the "weak link" in the borer's life cycle and the key to its control may be in its eight- month hibernation period from September to May.

Just recently, he learned that the borer hibernates because it continues to produce a "juvenile hormone" that keeps it from maturing. Now he hopes to give hibernating borers an extra dose of hormone so they won't wake up.

"If we could extend hibernation for a month, we could disrupt the insect's life cycle and control it," he explains. "This could be done with a chemical relative of the juvenile hormone."

While that finding represents a major breakthrough in understanding insect hibernation, Chippendale doesn't plan to stop there.

He's also trying to find out why the adult moth lays her eggs on the corn leaf and what causes the borers to start feeding there.

"It probably has something to do with chemical attractants in the corn plant," says Chippendale. "As we learn more about these chemicals, geneticists have a better chance to breed resistant varieties.

And he's studying the chemistry of the different organs of the borer. "If we can uncover a metabolic system that is unique to insects," he says, "we could develop an inhibitor that will control insects without affecting other animals."

As Chippendale studies borer physiology and its response to temperature and daylength, he is able to predict insect population and distribution. This helps farmers and others who are trying to protect their fields against the borer.

"In Missouri, we're purshing the northern limits of its distribution," explains Chippendale. "About 80 per cent of the borers die off because the winters are too cold. If this didn't happen, we'd really have a problem!"

The southwestern corn borer first came into this country from Mexico in 1913. Since then, it's spread throughout the Southern Corn Belt, but has not moved into the northern states.

Cotton planting time around the corner

By THOMAS A. BROWN, JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

Cotton planting time is just around the corner, and a number of farmers are wondering what variety of cotton to plant this season. An idea as to the comparative productivity of various cotton varieties tested in research plots in Southeast Missouri may be obtained from averages included in this article.

The average yields of the various varieties produced on a sandy loam, wilt- free, non-irrigated soil in Southeast Missouri during the three- year period 1969- 1971 by variety and average lint yield per acre in pounds, include:

Delcott 266, 1,084; Stoneville 213, 1,062; Coker 310, 1,037; Stoneville 7A, 1,009; Deltapine 16, 998; Deltapine 45A, 967; Auburn M, 961; Rex Smoothleaf 66, 954; and MO- DEL, 919.

Average yields produced on a heavy clay (gumbo), wilt-free irrigated soil in Southeast Missouri during the 1969- 1971 period, by variety and yield in pounds, are as follows:

Deltapine 16, 752; Delcott 277, 751; Stoneville 7A, 735; Stoneville 213, 734; Coker 310, 714; Deltapine 45A, 709; Rex Smoothleaf 66, 671; MO-DEL, 593; Auburn M, 578.

Fertilizer situation is still serious

By JOHN GARRETT
Area Agronomy Specialist

The fertilizer situation is still serious and is expected to remain this way until late June or July. There are fertilizer plants in the area that have not had any fertilizer all winter. A few plants have a fair amount of mixed fertilizer on hand at the present time. Most of this will be used as soon as weather permits.

Nitrogen is in extremely short supply. Most dealers are expecting to have sufficient N for their customers, but no guarantees are being made.

Anhydrous ammonia is the main source of N used in corn production. Corn acreage was expected to be increased this year, but the nitrogen shortage has caused many farmers to change their minds and turn to soybeans or grain sorghum.

Urea, ammonium nitrate, or solution nitrogen are just as good as anhydrous ammonia for corn, but the price will be double or triple per pound of actual N.

Without nitrogen you can expect corn to yield about 50 bushels per acre, so this tells me that if you don't have or can't get N by planting time, don't plant corn. If you can find some anhydrous, you should start applying as soon as the ground is dry enough. In this year of shortages nitrogen should be applied when you can get it.

The following suggestions may help you stretch your fertilizer supply a little further.

1. Establish realistic yield goals. With short supplies and higher prices, this may be the year to remain status quo as far as average yields are concerned.

2. Make every pound of fertilizer you apply count. Soil test and apply fertilizer as recommended.

3. Lime acid soils. If soil pH is 5.5 or below, fertilizer efficiency is reduced and you do not get full benefits out of what is applied.

4. Conserve available nitrogen supplies. Use no more N than required to meet established yield goals.

5. Conserve phosphate and potash supplies. Utilize soil tests to determine minimum requirements on all fields. If your soil tests 151 pounds phosphate or above, you can get by without applying any phosphate for one or two years with no decrease in yields.

6. Order fertilizer early and begin spreading soon as it is available.

7. Band fertilizer. Fertilizer rate can be reduced approximately one-third if banded.

8. Utilize animal manures if available. The nutrient content of animal manure varies, but will average about 4-2-6, N P205 + K20 per ton applied. To maximize efficiency and decrease odor, incorporate manure into the soil soon after application.

9. Watch planting rates. Adjust corn planting rates to fit yeild potential and N supply. About 14,000 to 16,000 plants per acre are adequate for 100 to 125 bushels per acre with 100 to 125 pounds nitrogen.

10. Plant on time if possible. Plant corn in April, milo in May, cotton May 1-15 and soybeans May to late June.

11. Select a high yielding adapted variety.

12. Apply recommended herbicides at proper rate and time to control weeds.

13. Band or broadcast adequate phosphate and potash.

14. Apply 100 to 120 pounds total N and not over 150 pounds per acre. The greatest increase from N comes from the first 75 pounds. The increase is gradual from 75 to 150 pounds per acre. It will be better to appiy 75 to 100 pounds N per acre and plant more acres than to apply 150 pounds on fewer acres in this year of short supply. One hundred pounds of N per acre will produce approximately 100 bushesl per acre with 16,000 to 17,000 plants per acre.

Probe into welfare fraud to resume

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A special Missouri House committee will resume its investigation into alleged welfare fraud and mismanagement when it meets Thursday in Kansas City.

Missouri Auditor John D. Ashcroft and officials of the U. S. Health, Education and Welfare Department also plan to begin an audit of the state welfare division in two weeks.

Welfare division figures show the overpayment rate for welfare and food stamp recipients was 14 per cent during a 1973 test period.

In addition, 7 per cent of those receiving welfare and food stamp payments were ineligible. Missouri ranks 21st among all states in the amount of error in welfare payments.

The Senate plans to resume its investigation of the Welfare Division after the legislative session is over.

Rep. Russell Goard, D-St. Louis, chairman of the House Welfare and Medicaid Committee, has introduced a resolution calling for a joint HouseSenate investigating committee.

"Welfare problems result from several factors," says Goward. "Two of the most important are new programs initiated by the federal government and continual changes in federal regulations. However, the state also has some problems in the areas of number of caseloads per worker as well as the rapid turnover of welfare division employes."

Rep. James Russell, D-Florissant, chairman of the House Approrpiations Committee, said the Missouri Welfare program costs about $340 million annually of which 45 per cent comes from state funds.

Harbin reports on school project

Supt. Sam Harbin

Supt. Sam Harbin related to the Sikeston Rotary Club some of the activities and results of a project to assess the educational program of Sikeston schools Monday night at Ramada Inn.

The project, to date, has involved about 1,300 students, parents and teachers in a general opinion survey of the school system, a one- day workshop last October involving all teachers, about 50 students and parents, a State Department of Education consultant and 10 faculty members from Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

Also, part of last fall's three- day orientation session for teachers was devoted to the project with consultants from the State Department of Education and representatives from Southeast Missouri.

Future plans for the current school year outlined by Harbin include participation in a statewide assessment test prepared by an organization for educational accountability. Only 72 schools of over 600 in the state were invited to participate in the test.

Also, he said one more workshop is planned on the afternoon of April 25. Participants in the workshop will be all teachers and as many students and parents who want to participate. He said parents and other adults who want to participate should phone the board of education office, 471-4454.

Harbin indicated the results of the survey show varying opinions among the 30 groups who completed the survey. In most cases the variance is not too wide.

However, in some cases , such as: board of education policies, feeling of cooperation between school and community, parent participation, grouping, home work, grading, discipline, student attitudes, sports, career development and others; the opinions vary enough that a workshop including students, parents and teachers would be valuable, he stated.

Summarizing, Harbin said accountability was not only a responsibility of the school system, but that parents, the business community and all citizens of the district have an obligation to cooperate and support the schools in providing quality educational opportunities for the students.

"I called the Social Security office and the county welfare office both twice and told them I had received too much," she said. "I was told it was okay to cash it, the money was mine. I still waited two weeks before I cashed it."

She received no state check in February, but did get her normal SSI checks for the two months, however.

"I'm just bogged down in bills," she said. "Most of my money goes for doctors and drugs because I take 12 to 15 different kinds of drugs. A friend had to loan me money to pay my rent.

"If this keeps on very long or if I have to pay money back to the government, I don't know what I'll do," she said.

A Kansas City man who has been unable to work regularly since an injury three years ago said he and his blind wife received help last month from friends, the Metro Lutheran Ministry and the Salvation Army. "But," he said, "we can't keep that up."

The couple received a federal overpayment in February but no state checks since then.

"If this isn't cleared up soon, I don't know what we can do," the husband said. "We aren't going to quit, though."

The couple took its problem to the office of Lt. Gov. William Phelps, who acts as the state's ombudsman.

An aide, Sid Rogers, said he has been working with state welfare officials to get the March and April payments sent as quickly as possible and then to solve the February problem later.

On the other side of the coin is a 50-year-old blind Kansas City man, who has a job as a darkroom technician.

"I'm not eligible for SSI payments because of my income level. But I kept getting the checks, including the one with the overpayment, and I kept sending them back and kept telling those Social Security people that I wasn't eligible for them.

"They kept telling me I was blind so I was eligible, but I knew I wasn't. I knew if I spent my check I'd have to pay if back sometime," he said, adding that it took three months to stop his SSI payments, which amounted to $140 a month. He said he is still trying to get the small monthly SSI payments to his wife stopped.

"I want only what I'm eligible for," he said. "We get state payments and we're eligible for them."

Officials in the state and federal offices said that recipients "in the long run will be maintained at the December level of income," before the federal program took over, but there was no indication when the February foulup would be cleared up.

"What's facing these people, who are having trouble making a living anyway, is a drop in some future payments," the lieutenant-governor's assistant said.

Park plans discussed by Charleston board

CHARLESTON — Plans for Charleston's new "Lincoln Park" were discussed Monday night at City Hall by the city Park and Recreation Board.

The city agency has leased the park grounds from the Urban Renewal Authority for 20 years, and is making improvements in paving, ball courts, fencing and lighting for outdoor activities.

The Lincoln Community Center is being remodeled to house various indoor activities, including tutoring, recreation, day care, senior citizens' "meals on wheels", and other activities, as well as the offices of the urban renewal and housing authorities.

Guests of the park board were Bob and Pat Goulson, Volunteers in Service to America workers recently assigned to Charleston, who will assist with some of the projects at the Lincoln Center.

The board heard reports on summer activities in the parks, which this year will include Little League, Babe Ruth League for 13 - to 15 - year - olds; Senior Babe Ruth teams, for 16-18; Girls' softball, for 13-15; and men's softball league. If enough are interested, a women's league may be developed.

There will be swimming and tennis lessons. Prices, hours and schedules will be announced later.

The board reminded the public that the speed limit for entering and driving at Bennie Hillhouse Park is 15 miles per hour. Fishing in Hequembourg Park is open only for those under 16 and over 60 years of age, although anyone may picnic or play there.

Charleston now has 51 acres in four parks; three baseball diamonds, two softball diamonds, (all lighted); one volleyball court; two basketball courts; and four tennis courts. There are picnic tables at each park. Recently a horseshoe game was added at Rolwing park, near the shelter, where participants may rest in the shade.

Phelps ruining Bond's 'kiddie corps image'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps turned 40 Friday.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who is 35, remarked to Phelps at a reception in Phelps office, "you're knocking heck out of the kiddie corps image."

Most of Bond's staff members and key appointees are under 40. State Auditor John Ashcroft will be 32 on May 9. Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth is 37. The Democratic state office holders, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick and State Treasurer James Spainhower, are 68 and 44, respectively.
